Here's 6-Point Recovery Plan of N. E. 'Little Business'

WASHINGTON, Feb. 2 (AP)—New England's 50 representatives of small business and industry attending a conference with Secretary Roper today adopted a six-point program for business recovery.

The six resolutions unanimously endorsed at a morning meeting:

1—We believe fundamental conditions are sound and that business will prosper if relieved from the fear of further undue government interference. Political management cannot be substituted for individual initiative.

2—We propose easier credit facilities of a reasonable and conservative nature for small business, either through existing agencies or by some other suitable method. We urge the encouragement of investment of private capital in new enterprises.

3—We propose repeal of the undistributed profits tax.

4—We urge that the proposed discriminatory tax on legitimate business corporations, stock of which is closely held, be abandoned.

5—We favor some reasonable, conservative plan to stimulate and revive the building industry.

6—We propose that employer and employe alike be held responsible for the faithful observance of mutual agreements.

FANNIE TALBERT TAYLOR

FATHER HEARS SCREAM, FINDS HIS DAUGHTER DYING

HAVERHILL, Feb. 2—Fannie Talbert Taylor, 26-year-old social registerite of this city, today died at Benson Hospital of injuries suffered in a 20-foot plunge from the bedroom of her home in Arlington place.

Miss Taylor was a member of the Vincent Club Boston eight years ago and a member of the Junior League. She was closely associated with the city's young social set.

Medical Examiner John L. O'Toole reported Miss Taylor died of a fracture at the base of her skull and said that death was "due to an accidental fall."

Dr. O'Toole declared the young woman lost her balance as she opened the window of her room to get some air last night. He said the window opened outward.

Although the accident occurred about dinner time, it was not revealed until the time of the young society girl's death today.

The family of the girl said her room on the second floor in the rear of the house had also been her workship, where she had spent many hours painting and drawing.

Attracted by his daughter's scream, Martin A. Taylor, a retired Boston broker, rushed out of the house and found her. Dr. O'Toole stated in the house also at the time was the girl's mother, Mrs. Margaret Taylor.

The girl was rushed to Benson Hospital, a private institution. She never regained consciousness, the medical examiner stated.

Miss Taylor was graduated from Miss Fay's school, Beacon street, Boston, and had attended Bradford Junior College in this city. She was a member of the exclusive Haverhill Country Club and Haverhill Pentucket Club.

Besides her parents she is survived by a brother and two sisters.

Asylum Quiz 'In Lap of Hurley'

State Auditor Thomas H. Buckley, given a political cold shoulder by Governor Hurley, today tossed the responsibility for reform of Massachusetts mental institutions into the governor's lap.

Snubbed when the governor failed to invite him to a conference today on the probe into the state asylums, which was instituted by his department, Buckley in effect told his superior:

"I've started it. Now you finish it."

His move followed accusations by Representative Philip G. Bowker of Brookline that the chief executive had been "dilatory" in directing the madhouse murder probe and those resulting from the Beano Breen and Louis Gaeta murders in Boston and Revere.

Expressing the wish that the appalling conditions he has uncovered be remedied, Buckley declared in a statement to the Boston Evening American:

"I hope that as a result of my continued interest in the welfare of the patients at state hospitals, some tangible results for their improved conditions will be forthcoming, no matter from what source such results proceed."

His declaration, State House observers asserted, cast down a gauntlet that will lead to a head-on meeting between Buckley and

Dewey Men Nab Schultz 'Heir'

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 2 (AP)—J. Richard (Dixie) Davis, long sought by Prosecutor Thomas E. Dewey as a leading heir to the late "Dutch" Schultz's $100,000,000-a-year policy racket in New York city, was arrested in a west side apartment today.

A special squad of Pennsylvania state police and Dewey aides battered down a door of the apartment, rushed in and seized Davis, who was personal attorney for Schultz, slain gang leader, in Schultz's many scrapes with the law.

Arrested with Davis, now disbarred, were George Weinberg, brother of the missing Schultz henchman, "Bo" Weinberg, and an actress named Hope Dare, held as a suspicious person. She wore a black wig.

Magistrate Nathan Beifel held Davis and Weinberg in $300,000 bail each on charges of being fugitives from indictments in the New York numbers racket smashing drive.

Miss Dare, whom Grimes described as "a friend of Davis for a long time," was held in $2500 bail as a suspicious person for further hearing with the others next Wednesday.

Indictments for Davis, Weinberg and ten others were obtained last July 14 by Dewey, now New York county district attorney, when he was special rackets prosecutor.

Britain Set For Pirate Sub War

By KINGSBURY-SMITH

International News Service Staff Correspondent

LONDON, Feb. 2—"Special measures" to end phantom submarine piracy in the Mediterranean were decided upon by the British cabinet today.

The decision was reached following consideration of secret reports that Generalissimo Francisco Franco, Spanish insurgent leader, had ordered resumption of unrestricted submarine warfare against all ships carrying supplies to the Spanish Loyalists.

Four ships, three British and one Dutch, have been attacked by a phantom submarine within the past three weeks, one of them, the British freighter Endymion, was sunk with a loss of 11 lives.

Nature of the "special measures" decided upon will be laid before signatories of the Nyon agreements at their emergency meeting this afternoon.

It was understood the measures considered by the cabinet included:

Disorder Reigns At Business Parley

Noisy Protests Prevent Speeches; N. E. "Little Men" Offer Plan

WASHINGTON, Feb. 2 (AP)—Hundreds of small business men, trying to out-talk and out-shout each other, endeavored today to set down what they think President Roosevelt should do to improve business.

A disorderly, noisy uproar filled the Commerce Department's huge auditorium when scores of industry's "little fellows" tried to talk at once, voted to ban speeches when they couldn't, and forced staid Secretary of Commerce Roper to shout through a loudspeaker in a vain effort to restore order.

Their first meeting ended in pandemonium. What was scheduled as the business men's general season was broken down within an hour after it started into ten discussion groups.

President Roosevelt sent greetings that were read to the nearly 1000 "little fellows" by Roper. The President said he was looking forward to seeing a committee from the business men tomorrow afternoon and predicted "the suggestions resulting from your conference will be very helpful to me."

DISORDER REIGNS

The scene of pandemonium followed soon after Fred Roth, Cleveland, O., shoe wholesaler, was elected permanent chairman.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Feb. 2 (INS)—One of the most daring lone robberies here in recent history—the fifth floor holdup of Shepard's department store, which netted about $1000—came to naught five minutes later when the bandit was captured and the loot recovered this afternoon.

The suspect, charged with armed robbery after he was identified by three girl cashiers, gave his name as Joseph Maloney, 34, of Webster, Mass. In his pockets police found the money and an unloaded .45 calibre pistol.

The bandit missed some $3000 which was kept back by the girls.

FALL RIVER, Feb. 2—A store window display which simulated the printing of currency today proved too tempting to a spectator who watched the seemingly endless chain of one-dollar bills emerge from the device.

So, in sight of several other watchers, he kicked in the window of the Star Jewelry Company and grabbed the money.

His total loot must have been disappointing, though, because it takes but three bills to operate the machine.

The display consists of a figurine of Uncle Sam, which turned a crank and caused the currency to roll out—and out—to three dollars' worth.

City-Wide Roundup Planned

The full strength of the police department was thrown on "street patrol duty" today in an emergency move to combat Boston's "increase in crime."

In the most drastic "crime order" issued in 20 years, Superintendent Edward W. Fallon announced that 850 extra men—all in plainclothes—would begin overtime street duty tonight "until further notice."

About 500 extra officers will patrol the streets through the city during the night and 350 in the day time. They will receive no additional pay.

The emergency measure came soon after Police Commissioner Joseph F. Timilty ordered a round-up of all suspicious persons in Boston—in the wake of Charlestown's second holdup in four days.

At the same time, reports of a wholesale shakeup in the police department were rife throughout the city.

FALLON GIVES ORDERS

Today's order by Superintendent Fallon presses into service officers who haven't seen street duty in years—men attached to the bureau of operations, hackney carriage bureau and traffic division.

Not since 1915, when the late Superintendent Michael H. Crowley ordered the entire police department to "get on the street" and capture John R. Meakin, "Boy Wine Bandit," has such a crime drive started in this city.

Meakin, who boasted of his raids on Boston liquor stores, was captured and sentenced to State Prison.

In an order titled "Prevention of Crime," Superintendent Fallon sent

Widow-Orphan Pension Bill Faces Fight

Huge Future Drains On Treasury Feared By Administration

WASHINGTON, Feb. 2 (INS)—Fearful of a huge drain on the Treasury through general World War pensions, the administration today moved to check a powerful House movement for the Gasque World War widows and orphans pension bill.

The measure, providing widows' pensions of $22 a month regardless of whether the veteran suffered in the service, was reported by the pensions committee in spite of an adverse budget bureau report.

RISING COST SEEN

Estimated to cost $68,000,000 the first year, if all the 188,000 eligibles applied for pensions, veterans' bureau officials said the cost would rise rapidly in the future as the death rate of veterans increases.

Brig.-Gen. Frank T. Hines, Veterans Bureau head, charged that granting of general pensions would reverse the policy established by Congress in dealing with disabled World War veterans. Congress, he said, sought to avoid a general pension system.

Under the Gasque bill, the widow of a veteran would receive a pension of $22 a month with $6 for each child, if married to the veteran prior to July 3, 1931. The time limit would not apply to later marriages if children were born.

AID FOR ORPHANS

An orphan would receive a pension of $28 a month up to 16 years of age, the pension to be continued until the orphan reached 21 if in a recognized school.

While the estimated cost is $68,000,000 the first year, the committee estimated that but about one-half the eligibles would apply and thus $36,000,000 would be the first year's cost.

Nurse, 70, Plans To Wed Farm Hand, 22

Connecticut River Cannot Prevent 2-Year Wooing

UNIONVILLE, Ct., Feb. 2 (INS)—Love cannot be denied—even though it is separated by a river.

On file at the town clerk's office in Farmington today was a marriage application of 22-year-old Josept Lorenick and his 70-year-old and wel-to-do sweetheart, Henrietta Wilhelmina Peiper, a nurse, of Hartford.

It took John two yearsto woo and win the love of his sweetheart on the banks of the Farmington river.

DATES ARE MADE

Two summers ago Henritta occupied a cottage on one bank and John lived on a farm on the opposite side.

John, who spent his spare time swimming, occasionally caught a glimpse of his future love bathing on the other side, but the river separated them.

It was not for long, however, for the fiver gets low in summer and soon brought the two together.

At first it was swimming dates, fishing and walking.

MARRIAGE BROACHED

Then, as John tells the story, while the lovers were walking along the road to Farmington, Henritta broached the subject of marriage and it was disclosed each wanted to marry the other.

The couple will be married some time this month.

"They said she was too old for me to marry," John said. "Well, I know lots of girls and what would I have? Someone who ha me out all night till 3 in the morning, running around and drinking and when I have to get up early in the morning I'd be all worn out."

'Carry' Maps New Axe War

Slot Machines Demolished

ALTON, Ill., Feb. 2 (AP)—The "Carry Nation of the slot machines" complained today, "They took my axe," but warned Madison County tavern keepers she had another and intended to better the .750 "wrecking average" she claimed for a tour last night.

Mrs. Irene Kite, veteran of a one-woman crusade last December, had announced last week she would resume her raids if the "one-armed bandits" did not disappear.

They didn't. Accompanied by a man she identified as her "axe caddy," Mrs. Kite swept into an East Alton saloon, swung her axe wildly, and demolished three of the four machines there.

She came to grief in nearby Edwardsville, she said, when a barkeeper grabbed her axe before she could go into action and ejected the wrecker and her "caddy."

Mrs. Kite began her crusade, she declared, after her husband's dice table was closed up. Slot machines are illegal in Illinois.

Dr. Bencker Changes 'X' Testimony in Will Case

Following closely on his relinquishment of all claim to the $13,000 legacy left him by Mrs. Reka Harris, Dr. H. William Bencker testified today that he changed testimony he had given the assistant attorney-general in 1936.

Resuming the stand in Suffolk Superior Probate Court before Judge John V. Mahoney, Bencker said testimony he gave yesterday to the effect that Mrs. Julia Bancewicz had marked her "X" beside the signature of her daughter, Stella, was a reversal of what he told Assistant Attorney-General Maurice Goldman in November, 1936.

Sixteen relatives and friends are contesting the will of Mrs. Harris.

DRAWS UP WILL

Dr. Bencker drew up the will for the 80-year-old Jamaica Plain woman the first time he was called to treat her at her Lamartine street home, half an hour after he first saw her. Two days later she died.

The name "Stella Bancewicz" was signed to the will as a witness, and beside it was an "X."

When he talked to the assistant attorney-general in 1936 he said the "X" was made by Stella.

SECOND SIGNATURE

Dr. Bencker also testified he had said previously he had returned a second time on the night the will was made to treat Mrs. Harris; but testimony was introduced to prove that in 1936 he said he returned to get the signature of a witness to the will.

The prosecuting attorney also produced testimony to prove the second signature to the will had been obtained at 6 p. m. the day after the document was drawn up.

After he treated her, she asked how much he charged and, when he told her $3, she insisted on paying him $10, because "he is the first man who has ever been kind to me."

Then she asked him to write out the will that disposed of the $21,000 estate. The case was taken under advisement.

Father and Son In Final Vows

Weston College Rite Unique in History

With a score of friends and relatives attending the ceremonies a father and son today took the final solemn vows as members of the Society of Jesus at Weston College. The two men were the Rev. Frederick L. Berigen, S. J., and his father, Brother John Berigen, S. J., both natives of Worcester.

The double ceremony, thought the first of its kind in ecclesiastical history, took place in the college chapel. The occasion marked the Catholic feast day of the Purification of Our Lady. It was also Candlemas day.

Father Berigan, the son, entered the Society in 192?, following his graduation from Holy Cross. His father entered the order as a lay brother in 1927, on the death of his wife. It was by coincidence that the two completed their preparation for the vows at the same time, no special arrangement having been made.

Soviet Scientists Cut Off From Food Bases By Cracks in Ice

MOSCOW, Feb. 2 (AP)—Soviet authorities mobilized their rescue forces today for a dash to the aid of four scientists perilously adrift in the Greenland sea on a storm-driven block of cracking polar ice.

The four, who have been making polar weather observations since last May, radioed yesterday that a six-day storm had split the ice floe on which their camp is situated, now about 1100 miles from the North Pole.

Dr. Otto J. Schmidt, head of the Northern Sea route department, who landed the polar observers at their base last year, said recently a cracking floe was not necessarily dangerous and there was confident belief here the campers would escape serious difficulty until relief reached them.

TOO SMALL FOR PLANES

Commander Ivan Papinin and his party, however, were cut from two reserve food bases and a storehouse of technical equipment by cracking of the floe. They were confined to a camp 1000 feet long and 6.. feet wide, too small for rescue planes to land.

Nevertheless, five planes and three ships were preparing for the rescue. Professor Schmidt was to leave at once for Murmansk, 900 miles north of Moscow and about 1000 miles across the Arctic Ocean from the campers.

SHIP WAITING

The steamer, Taimyr, was awaiting him, with two airplanes to form the principal rescue party. The additional rescue craft were to be ready shortly.

Commander Papanin's radio yesterday indicated the quartet would move into his emergency snowhouse, and "in case our communications are cut off, please don't worry."

Market District Periled by Fire

While most of the downtown apparatus was returning from a needless alarm in Charlestown, fire that necessitated three alarms broke out early today in a paint store at Dock square.

The blaze swept through the five-story brick building at 107-109 Washington street and threatened for a time to spread into the nearby market district. Damage was estimated at $20,000.

Two hot air explosions hampered firemen at the start of the fight.

ALICE SEGLIE

"Thrilling Experience"

JERSEY CITY, N. J., Feb. 2 (AP)—A shapely and pretty stenographer, who knew the combination to a big steel vault but wouldn't use it, had an assembly committee which is investigating voting conditions in Hudson County frankly puzzled today.

Brown-eyed Alice Seglie's refusal to produce the records of the November gubernatorial election forced the committee to try to seize them and then to seek state police aid—both in vain.

Assemblyman Henry Young, Jr., Newark lawyer and committee chairman, his eyes plainly showing the fatigue of three days of legal maneuvering and conferences, commented:

THRILLING EXPERIENCE

"I can't say what our next move will be."

The 31-year-old stenographer—Mrs. Fila in private life and niece of Paul Seglie, veteran Republican politician—was cool as any of the men after her three hectic days as the star holdout against the assembly and said it was "a thrilling experience."

Miss Seglie, who three times defied the assembly committee's subpoena to produce the records from the vault in the absence of her sick superior, Charles F. Stoebling, county commissioner of permanent registration, said:

"As for being disturbed by it all—well, why should I? I'm just trying to do what is right."

LACK LEGAL RIGHT

When the state police refused to aid the committee last night, after being advised by Assistant Attorney-General Robert Peacock they had no "warrant in the law" to do so, Assistant Committee Counsel David Wiener said new strategy might be considered today at a conference in the Newark office of Robert H. McCarter, the committee's chief counsel.

Whether that strategy would include a request to Assembly Speaker Herbert J. Pascoe for contempt warrants—often threatened by Young—was not known.

Mr. Groundhog Shivers, Hides

Mr. Groundhog emerged from his winter lair today, saw his shadow cast by a bright sun and hopped back for six more weeks of sleep, thus auguring a late spring.

It was a cold sun, however, that greeted the legendary weather prophet.

The day started cold and the mercury was due to drop to about 12 degrees during the day. In the early morning hours the temperatures hovered around the 13 mark.

Even if Mr. Groundhog turns out to be a "phoney," expert weather forecasters, backed by meteorological facts, were doing a little prohesying themselves today. They warned citizens to prepare for a sweltering June, July and first half of August.

Mourning-Clad Woman Dying In Plunge

Falls Three Stories To Coping From Back Bay Home

Clad in mourning and without shoes, Mrs. Florence M. Brand, 49, plunged from her fourth floor apartment to a second-flood coping early today in St. Stephen street, Back Bay.

Rushed to Boston City Hospital in a police ambulance, doctors held out little hope for her recovery. She was found to have suffered a fracture of the skull and numerous body injuries.

Her unconscious form was first sighted by a neighbor who notified Peter Bishop, custodian of the building. Bishop notified police and the officers removed her from the precarious position on the coping through the window of a second floor apartment.

At an early hour today police were unable to find any trace of her husband or relations. A letter signed.

Police announced they were seeking "James Brandt" believed to be a brother of the injured woman, whose address is 43 Des Ears street, Montreal, Canada.

Lodge Becomes Big Senate Figure

Prestige Grows Rapidly; Housing Bill Clause Loses Under Great Pressure

WASHINGTON, Feb. 2—Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, Jr., of Massachusetts today emerged with tremendously increased prestige from the bitter Senate battle preceding the administration's two-vote victory in pushing through its $2,000,000,000 housing bill.

Devoid of the Lodge prevailing wage amendment, the measure has been sent to President Roosevelt for his signature. It is the first piece of administration-sponsored major legislation to secure passage in either the special or regular sessions.

It was passed by a vote of 42 to 40 over a determined Lodge-led opposition, which was defeated only when the stiffest New Deal pressure had been applied—at the risk of forfeiting labor support and splitting the Democratic party even more than at present.

LINES UP SUPPORT

The Massachusetts senator, fast assuming the status of his late illustrious grandfather, secured the support of a solid Republican bloc and of a good sprinkling of Democrats in his efforts to insure payment of prevailing wages on all construction under the act.

By his insistence on a roll call vote, he succeeded in forcing New Deal senators to record themselves against his amendment, which had received the endorsement of William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor.

The bill was designed to stimulate the investment of private capital in the basic construction industries and the White House feared that inclusion of the prevailing wage amendment would discourage investors and jeopardize the housing program.

GREAT PRESSURE EXERTED

Brain trust pressure, long-distance calls from constituents and other similar influencing devices were employed by New Deal leaders to compel doubtful Democratic Senators to leave the Lodge bloc.

They succeeded, but, as a result, relations within their own ranks were severely strained as debate on the highly-controversial anti-lynching bill began.

The surprising opposition strength is expected to culminate in sidetracking of the measure by the administration if a graceful means of doing so can be arranged.

Following the heated discussion last night, Senator Lodge told the upper house:

"The responsibility will rest directly with the administration, which blocked this amendment, if employers take advantage of the present unemployment situation to reduce their wages. I hope this will not happen."

WINS LABOR FRIENDSHIP

Previously, he had read a telegram supporting the amendment from William Green, who is at Miami.

Senator Lodge's actions in regard to the bill served to make more firm the growing friendship between the A. F. of L. and the Republican Party and to give that party an issue on which to draw possible further labor support.

Passage of the housing bill, Senate observers said, was a two-fold victory; the first for the administration and the second a personal triumph for the young Massachusetts legislator, who already has been prominently mentioned as 1940 presidential timber.

Lodge Pushes Bill On Neutrality Shift

WASHINGTON, Feb. 2 (INS)—Congress, instead of the President as provided in existing law, would have the final say on clamping down a neutrality policy during wars between foreign powers, under a bill Senator Lodge (R) Massachusetts, advocated today. He appeared before the Senate foreign relations committee in secret to urge his proposition.

Where the present neutrality act gives the President discretionary authority to determine when foreign nations are at war and finding that fact he must embargo shipments of munitions and other supplies to all the belligerents, Lodge's bill provides the President must inform Congress when he finds a war existing abroad.

Then if Congress by concurrent resolution agrees with him, provisions of the neutrality act would go into effect. Whenever the President finds the war at an end he must so inform Congress, which in turn would decide whether to lift the bans carried in the neutrality law.

There is also a stipulation in the Lodge bill that American ships carrying any kind of cargo to belligerent nations against whom the neutrality ban is applied, shall do so at their own risk and without the protection afforded now in international law.

Senator Key Pittman (D.), Nevada, foreign relations chairman, appointed a sub-committee consisting of himself as chairman and Senators Thomas (D), Utah, and Schwellenbach (D.), Washington, to consider the Lodge bill.

Chinese, Japan Now at 'War,' Hirota Says

No China Government Recognized, He Tells Diet

TOKYO, Feb. 2 (AP)—Foreign Minister Koki Hirota told the Japanese Diet (Parliament) today:

"There is no Chinese Central Government recognized by Japan. A state of war exists between the two countries."

(Thus far in the seven months of Chinese-Japanese hostilities, Japan has not declared war on China.)

Hirota's statement answered a question by Takejiro Nishioka, who declared that foreign powers, with Great Britain and Russia in the lead, had been supplying China with arms and military funds for which compensation or security must have been offered.

He had asked the foreign minister his views on "rights and interests" obtained before the outbreak of hostilities "by powers which enter into contracts with the national government of China which they recognize, but which Japan does not recognize.

Admiral Yonai, naval minister, also was questioned by Parliament members. On naval policy he replied:

"Japanese naval policy is independent, designed to meet Japan's own needs. Even if other naval powers build 'million-ton warships' it does not necessarily follow that Japan must do the same."

Nye Sees Opening For Neutrality Act

WASHINGTON, Feb. 2 (AP)—Some congressional neutrality advocates said they saw today an opening wedge toward possible invocation of the neutrality act in the statement of Japan's foreign minister that a "state of war exists" between China and Japan.

Senator Nye (R.), of North Dakota said it appeared that the statement of Koki Hirota "ought to occasion immediate invocation" of the act.

"It seems to me," Nye said, "that there now is no post left to hide behind for not invoking the law. I am wondering what excuse the administration can give for not acting, now that there is something resembling an official pronouncement that war exists."

At the State Department officials said they lacked information as to the full implications of Hirota's statement.

Fear 3 American Missionaries Slain

SHANGHAI, Feb. 2 (INS)—Alarming reports were received here today from Hankow, stating three American missionaries have been missing since December 2 and now are feared to have been killed.

The Hankow reports described these missionaries as Mr. and Mrs. Alva Harsh of Pertburg, W. Va., and Miss Minerva Neher of Laverne, Cal. They are members of the Church of Brethren Mission at Showyang, Shansi province.

Japs Claim Rout Of Chinese at Pengpu

SHANGHAI, Feb. 2 (AP)—The Japanese army tonight announced its capture of Pengpu in the major battle raging northwest of Nanking and declared the Chinese retreats on that front were turning rapidly into a rout.

The Japanese asserted that in taking Pengpu, on the Hwai river, 90 miles south of the strategic railway junction of Suchow, they had gained the key to that junction, main prize of the present phase of the Chinese-Japanese war.

Fengyang, on the Hwai east of Pengpu, also fell, the Japanese said.

A Japanese communique declared:

"Especially severe fighting preceded the fall of Pengpu. Our forces charged into the city over the battered Chinese defenses."

Airplanes were said to have played a vital part in smashing the Chinese defenses.

Chinese authorities neither confirmed nor denied the Japanese accounts, but said there still was heavy fighting south of Pengpu.

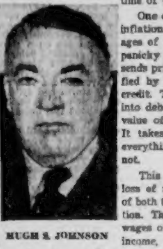
Gen. Johnson Says:

KILL WAR PROFITS

Civilian Morale Important

By HUGH S. JOHNSON

WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. 2—In the President's armament message, he observed that "the time has come for the Congress to enact legislation aimed at the prevention of profiteering in time of war."



HUGH S. JOHNSON

One of the worst aspects of war is price inflation. War creates instantaneous shortages of almost everything. That results in panicky bidding for the scant supply and sends prices soaring. This process is intensified by the effect of war on money and credit. The country is plunging headlong into debt. Its existence is threatened. The value of its money is therefore in doubt. It takes more and more money to buy everything, whether there is a shortage or not.

This may be more dangerous than the loss of many battles. It ruins the morale of both the military and the civilian population. The great bulk of us who live on wages or salaries or other forms of fixed income, are the first and heaviest sufferers. Our income does not go up in step with prices. Very soon the whole civilian population is suffering privation.

This is particularly true of families of men at the front. Necessarily living on low incomes themselves, they hear of the sufferings of their own people and of the fortunes made by receivers of high prices. The inevitable result is hot resentment at the government. In several German war memoirs, this is given as the principal cause of the German collapse.

Such runaway rises in price (depreciation of the value of money) have another military effect. Modern war requires such vast expenditures for material, much of which has to be bought abroad, that the mountainous prices and the vanishing credit of the country sometimes makes it impossible to support the sheer money cost of the war.

It is now very clear that if we had not entered the World War just when we did, and taken on our shoulders the burden of their debts and spending, the defenses of the Allies would have collapsed. They were at the end of their financial tether.

The President is right. We must avoid war profiteering and inflation. The way to do that is to put a ceiling over prices as soon as war is imminent, and to confiscate all profits due to war by a 100 per cent tax on all profits in excess of the average of the past three year's profits in peace.

But that is not what the proposed Connally bill would do. It goes farther than taking all profits due to war of eliminating profiteering. Though not quite as drastic as the old Nye proposals, it is cut from the same cloth. The idea in both suggestions is, "when war comes, abolish the profits system"—not "to take all the profits due to war" but "in war, to take all profits."

There is a distinction as wide as the difference between victory and defeat, and any such measure would be as dangerous to victory as no measure at all.

It applies the present ruinous undistributed profits tax and intensifies it. It tends to abolish the profit incentive to production.

Ours is still a profits economy. It persuades men to work, effort and production by the hope of gain. The only alternative is the Fascist or Communist idea of compelling effort and production by fear of punishment. Our profits incentive has worked to the greatest result of production in history. The compulsion idea is an unproved experiment. War demands not less production than peace, but immeasurably greater production.

It seems an act of madness now by statute to attempt to compel an abandonment in war of our proved system of production for an unproved theory. It would wreck our economic pattern and probably legislate defeat and disaster.

The DAILY WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

"Washington Merry-Go-Round," by Drew Pearson and Robert S. Allen, sprightly and informative column on the inside activities of political Washington, is now a daily feature of the Boston Evening American. It will also appear in the Boston Sunday Advertiser every Sunday.

By DREW PEARSON AND ROBERT S. ALLEN

WASHINGTON—Barring some unforeseen emergency, the President will take his usual mid-winter fishing vacation this month.

Nothing has yet been said about it publicly, but the tip-off on his plan was the little announcement that Jimmy, his son and secretary, would participate in the Marines' war-game maneuvers in the Caribbean next week. Jimmy holds a reserve commission as lieutenant colonel in the Marine Corps.

With the national defense message out of the way and only one or two more business conferences scheduled, the President is about caught up with his current plans and feels he is in a position to take a couple of weeks off from the official grind.

Preparations for the trip were begun very quietly several days ago, but in keeping with the customary Secret Service policy no information will be released until the President is about ready to depart.

UNBASHFUL BRAIN TRUSTER—Adolf Berle, original Brain Truster and great believer in his own destiny, was telling friends of the offer he had received from Cordell Hull to become assistant secretary of state.

"They want me to come down and prevent the world from massacring a lot of women and children," opined Berle. "I don't want to go, but I suppose someone has got to save them."

BERLE BOYCOTT—While Berle was debating whether or not he would accept the job, newspapermen covering the State Department had declared a boycott against him if he were placed in charge of press relations, as Secretary Hull has intended.

Worried, Berle appealed to an executive of a newspaper in New York to telephone his Washington bureau and ascertain how serious was the boycott.

The report relayed back to Berle in New York was that he was about as popular with the newspapermen, whose opinions he was expected to influence, as the anti-lynch bill is with Southern Senators.

POOR PAY-POOR DIPLOMATS—Tension in U. S. foreign relations brings into focus again the sometimes dubious quality of U. S. diplomats, and the fact that if you want good diplomats you have to pay them.

No country comparable in size or wealth with the United States pays its diplomats so little. The salary of an Ambassador is $17,500. In addition he gets his house rent free, and a "representation allowance" for entertainment. This allowance varies with the post, the maximum being $4800 at London and Paris. It is not paid to the ambassador but to the embassy, against vouchers showing actual expense, and if the expense is less, the full amount is not paid.

By contrast, the British ambassador to Washington gets about $80,000, not including both salary and entertainment allowance. The Brazilian ambassador is paid $84,000. The French ambassador gets 1,000,000 francs, which now is about $33,000.

U. S. Ministers are paid only $10,000, though entertainment alone sometimes costs them that much.

Result: only wealthy men can become U. S. diplomats, and wealth doesn't necessarily mean ability.

LITTLE BUSINESS MAN—Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau and SEC Chairman Douglas are working out the details of a plan—to be sent to Congress shortly with White House blessing—that really will do something for the little business man.

The proposal will meet one of the most urgent needs of the present economic situation—that of supplying "little fellows" with long-term credit.

With business in the doldrums, banks are leery about such loans, and there isn't enough in a stock issue of ten to a hundred thousand dollars to interest investment houses. As a result, small business men have complained to the President and Secretary Roper that literally they are being starved to death through lack of a low interest-rate money market.

The Morgenthau-Douglas plan is aimed at filling this urgent want through a new government corporation which would issue debentures up to $500,000 at a charge of not more than 3 per cent.

Morgenthau and Douglas plan to set up a Little Business Credit Corporation as a part of the Federal Reserve Board, which has the power under certain conditions to extend short-term loans. The new corporation would be modeled after the limited-dividend mortgage corporations authorized by the new Housing Act to finance low-cost apartment projects.

Hitler's Minister Of War Quits For Love

Another 'Wally Affair' Cited as Marshal Resigns

BERLIN, Feb. 2 (AP)—Marshal Werner von Blomberg, minister of war, handed his resignation to Reichsfuehrer Hitler before going on his honeymoon, a highly reliable informant disclosed today.

There had been indications the officers'-corps of the army was not pleased by marriage of the 59-year-old marshal to Erika Grohn on January 12 and this was followed by the reports he would relinquish his post.

Hitler and Von Blomberg conferred at the war ministry on January 21. The Fuehrer was seen to enter with great excitement, and later emerged appearing pale and grave. Soon thereafter the war marshal left for Italy.

An official announcement will not be made before the end of the week and may be delayed longer. It will be coupled, a most authoritative informant indicated, with publication of a scheme for conduct of military affairs in the future.

COMPARED WITH WALLY

Von Blomberg retains the title of field marshal, there being no retirement for that rank. Field marshals remain active for life.

(Marshal von Blomberg and his bride have been honeymooning in strict seclusion on the Isle of Capri for the past five days. They passed through Rome on their way to the island without seeing Italian officials.)

Colonel General Werner von Fritsch, commander-in-chief of the Reichswehr, who was said to have acted as spokesman for the army in suggesting the field marshal's resignation, also has resigned.

Von Fritsch submitted his resignation last Sunday, but Hitler has not yet acted on it. Von Fritsch has gone on leave.

His discharge as chief of the army will follow soon, military circles predict. They contended he never was wholeheartedly behind the Hitler regime and it seemed apparent he was out of the running for war minister.

Germans who have been aware that the war minister's resignation was impending, referred to it as another "Wallis Simpson affair"—referring to the decision of former King Edward VIII of England to abdicate rather than give up the woman of his choice.

They said that Von Blomberg, realizing how formidable was the opposition in the army to his marriage, remarked:

"Well, I love her, and I would rather give up my job than leave her."

BRIDE IS 28

The 59-year-old field marshal's bride is 28 and the daughter of a carpenter. The marriage ceremony was performed secretly in a Berlin marriage clerk's office, and it was not until two days later that the bride's maiden name became known to the public.

Colonel General Hermann Wilhelm Goering, air minister and economics chief of the Reich, stood out as most favored of possible successors of Von Blomberg in the war ministry.

General Walter Von Reichenau, commander of the Munich garrison, also was frequnetly mentioned.

There also was the possibility Feichsfuehrer Hitler himself might assume the war portfolio, following the analogy of Premier Mussolini in Italy.

Britain Weighs Sub War Plans

able a virtual convoy system for British ships engaged in legitimate trade with Spain.

Extension of patrol zones to bring them nearer Spanish territorial waters.

Notification to General Franco that any suspected submarine located in patrol zones will be attacked immediately.

A request that France join in a vigorous protest to General Franco, while Britain separately notifies him it intends to demand compensation for loss of the Endymion.

The British would like to bar all submarines from the western Mediterranean, but fear Italy would refuse to agree on the grounds such action would set a dangerous precedent.

Two of Britain's most modern cruisers—the Southampton and Newcastle—have been ordered to proceed immediately to Valencia to strengthen British naval forces in the western Mediterranean.

This action, International News Service learned today, was taken as a direct result of the torpedoing and sinking of the Endymion.

The two cruisers will augment eight British destroyers—the Fury, Firedrake, Fortune, Forester, Faulkner, Fearless, Foresight and Foxhound—now scouring the Mediterranean for the submarine.

Battle Michigan Snow, Flood Peril

MARQUETTE, Mich., Feb. 2 (INS)—Rescue workers fought a double menace of floods and snow-blocked highways, which were taking a huge toll in property loss and suffering in upper Michigan today.

A big ice jam that blocked the Au Train river from flowing into Lake Superior near Munising was blasted, causing the river to back up, flooding hundreds of acres.

Navy Chief Denies Link With Britain

Admiral Leahy Says Building Program Designed to Protect U. S.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 2 (INS)—The United States Navy "has no plans to join with any other nation in the defense of this country," Admiral William D. Leahy, chief of operations, declared today.

Testifying in support of the proposed $800,000,000 naval building program before the House naval affairs committee, the Admiral in response to sharp questioning from Republican members, denied emphatically that "we propose to ally our navy with Britain's."

"This proposed program is designed to protect the United States from aggressive attack without aid from any other nation," he said.

Representative Maas of Minnesota, ranking Republican on the committee, asked:

"Is it the plan of this country to join with Great Britain?"

"The Navy Department has no plans to join with any other nation in the defense of this country should an aggression war be waged against us," Admiral Leahy replied.

The admiral also vigorously denied that the program was designed to permit this country to join with Britain and France in "policing" the world.

GIVES CHINA DATA

"It is my understanding that the present policy is the same as heretofore—to seek to reduce naval armaments," he asserted.

"We are only trying to maintain the 5-5-3 ratio of the Washington and London treaties. In my opinion, preparedness is essential to peace."

"Your program has never contemplated a coalition of navy powers against us?" Representative Brewster (R.) of Maine asked.

"It has not," Admiral Leahy replied.

Regarding the navy's activities in China, the admiral said:

"There are maintained on the Yangtze river a small number of river gunboats under treaty arrangement with Great Britain, Japan, China, France and other nations.

"The small naval force that is maintained in Chinese waters is for the purpose of evacuating Americans in troubled times."

"Did the Navy originate the theory that it would take five Americans to whip three Japanese?" Brewster asked.

"That is the first time I ever heard that was true," Admiral Leahy snapped.

"Then how did they arrive at the 5-5-3 ratio?"

The admiral explained it was fixed "in the belief that it would so establish the navies of the world that none would single-handedly be able to wage a war of aggression."

The American navy "ship for ship is equal to any other navy in the world," he asserted. For another nation to successfully attack it the Admiral said, it would "need a navy superior to ours by at least a 100-66 ratio."

Brewster asked who was responsible for sending three cruisers to Singapore.

"I was—the navy was," Leahy answered.

"Was it to notify the world that we had alliances with which to wage an aggressive war in Asiatic waters?"

"It was not," he replied.

Brewster questioned Leahy at length regarding the reason why this country should attempt to maintain a 5-3 ratio with Japan.

Earlier Admiral Leahy had told Brewster that he (Leahy) would want "at least a 2-1 ratio to fight an aggressive war."

U. S. Admiral Not Afraid Of Japs

WASHINGTON, Feb. 2 (INS)—During the course of Admiral Wm. D. Leahy's testimony before the House Naval Committee today he was asked this question by Rep. Brewster (R.) of Maine:

"If the Japanese navy were equal to our's would you be willing to meet them?"

"I would be most happy," grimly replied the Navy's highest ranking officer.

France Plans Six New Warships

PARIS, Feb. 2 (AP)—A proposal for France to lay down six 35,000-ton battleships within the next Cabinet tomorrow by Naval Minicabinet tomorrow by Naval Minister William Bertrand, a member of his staff said today.

The minister will ask the cabinet to approve a request to parliament to vote a billion francs (about $33,230,000) immediately and a billion francs each year for six years, earmarked for construction of battleships outside the usual navy appropriations.

The first billion francs would be used to start immediate construction of two 35,000-ton ships.

Two additional ships would be laid down in 1939 and two in 1940, giving France a total of eight 35,000-ton warships. Two such ships now are building.

Speeches Blocked By Business Men

order for general discussion, but the determination of innumerable men to make themselves heard resulted in such an uproar—with cries of "chairman," and "sit down" and "please be quiet"—that it was quickly determined to split the conference into groups immediately.

Out of the first hectic session of the conference, which met at the President's invitation, came several concrete suggestions. The chief one was by Roth—that the "little fellows" have a permanent advisory council similar to the business advisory council which represents larger interests. Another requested creation of a special government agency to handle small business loans.

Even the decision to disband into groups failed, however, to restore order in the Commerce Department auditorium where the conference was held.

In the midst of continued shouts for permission to make speeches, or motions, the main body of visitors was resolved into a committee for discussing miscellaneous subjects. Most of the business men re-

Loans to small companies, unem-

SPEECHES CONTINUE

In that general "committee" meeting, speeches were permitted to continue, while the smaller groups took up such problems as:

Loans to small companies, unemployment, fair trade practices, social security, research for small business, wages and hours, housing, installment selling and the development and locating of small industries.

The speech-making in the auditorium continued until the recess for lunch—and after.

A. S. Shaffer, Philadelphia building contractor, just kept on talking after the recess. A policeman finally asked him to quit, so janitors could sweep out.

Meanwhile New England's 60 representatives of small business and industry adopted a six-point program for business recovery. Their conclusions were:

That conditions are sound and business will prosper if relieved of uncertainty as to government interference. Individual initiative preferable to political management.

Easier credit facilities are needed and private investment in new enterprises should be encouraged.

PROFITS TAX ATTACKED

Undistributed profits tax should be repealed.

Proposed discriminatory tax on closely-held, legitimate business corporations should be abandoned.

Stimulation of building industry favored by definite plan.

Employer and employe alike should be held responsible for observance of mutual agreements.

Long before the first session of the conference opened dozens of the business men filled the lobby of the Commerce Department building, registered as rapidly as they could, and filed into the department's auditorium.

In registering they filled out cards setting forth their names, names of concerns they represented, home addresses, products handled and Washington addresses.

GROUP TO SEE PRESIDENT

At the registration tables they received copies of the program for the two days of meeting. This showed that the committee to see the President would call at the White House at 3:30 p. m. tomorrow.

The President's welcome to the hundreds of merchants, small manufacturers, and other business men was presented by Secretary of Commerce Roper in a speech delivered at the first session.

Preceding the conference, many of the "little fellows" in business voiced protests against what they termed unfair trade practices of some large concerns.

Representatives of retail merchants from all parts of the country went to the session expressing determination to demand action against various types of chain store organizations.

About 700 were in the auditorium to hear Roper read the President's greeting. It said:

"I welcome you to Washington. Your meeting, called by the Secretary of Commerce at my request, is intended to more intimately acquaint me with the problems of smaller businesses. I anticipate that the suggestions resulting from your conference will be very helpful to me. I am, therefore, looking forward to conferring with your committee at the White House tomorrow afternoon."

"This is your meeting," Roper told the business men, "and should be so conducted by you as to bring out concrete interpretations of conditions which a committee to be designated by this conference will in turn present in such form tomorrow at the conference table with the President."

The secretary cautioned his audience against asking too much of government.

"Efforts to permanently help business must not leave out of consideration the facts that our greatest assets are human resources and the greatest attribute is human initiative," he said. "This initiative needs to be encouraged and not discouraged."

"NOT A WHITEWASH"

Roper suggested that the committee to call on the President should be composed of 10 or 12 persons.

Roper expressed the hope that the results of the meeting would "enable the President to get the picture of the situation as you see it and as you would like to have it presented to him," and told the conference "this is not a whitewash meeting."

In the pre-conference discussions, some of the small business men said they were interested in getting taxes imposed on chain corporations. Others sought conference approval of varied types of restrictions on their big competitors.

Many said they believed these demands might figure in President Roosevelt's efforts to end monopolies and business "abuses."

The small business men at today's conference were from stores and factories, men who only yesterday took off their grocery aprons and drug store jackets, and men who usually wear the overalls of cattle raisers.

All highly articulate, they had asked that they, as well as the nation's leading industrialists and financiers, be permitted to lay their problems before the administration.

Charles P. Bloomer, executive vice-president of the wearing apparel board of trade of Pennsylvania, prepared a resolution asking creation of a federal "intermediate credit agency."

Dewitt M. Emery of Akron, O., 215-pound president of the National Small Business Men's Association, said:

"I fail to see any need for specific legislation to help the little fellow. If the government would only let us alone, we can pull ourselves out."

Marcus Snyder, a Wyoming rancher who brought his wife along on their first trip East in 27 years, suggested that the Farm Credit Administration "boost their ante" on farm loans.

RAPS HOUSING BILL

Clarence R. Riley of Chicago criticised the government's new housing program as "90 per cent loans to real estate which is dead capital."

"A committee of humanitarians" should work out a plan whereby "a worker would not be killed off by the time he is 40," suggested Paul E. Boze, a grocer from Anderson, Ind.

J. N. Hayden, of an Indianapolis veneer and lumber company, proposed, among other things, that the government "cut down or simplify" Social Security reports.

"Give business a chance to plan six months ahead," was the plea brought from Brattleboro, Vt., by E. L. Chatterton, a retail furniture man. Frank F. Carter, soap manufacturer of Wayland, Mass., had the same idea.

M. A. Moers, Cincinnati salesman, declared the first thing to do "is to bring the CIO and the A. F. of L. together."

'Little Men' Have Very Busy Day

WASHINGTON, Feb. 2 (AP)—Sidelights on President Roosevelt's conference of small business men:

Miss Julia M. Ring, who runs an agency furnishing watchmen for ships at Philadelphia, suggested that the government pay a little more attention to the plight of the middle class and a little less to the so-called underprivileged.

"The middle class is the backbone of the nation," she said.

Tow-headed Ellis H. Scott, a Rutherford, N. J., moving man, tried to open the conference with a prayer but was shouted down in the general bedlam.

Scott yelled above the crowd: "If we can't have a prayer in this God's country, then where can we?"

But the chair refused to recognize him.

Mrs. Lillian R. Goodman, secretary of the Goodman Products Company, Brooklyn, N. Y., tried to demand equal rights for women at the conference, but her voice was drowned out by shouts from men. "All the men want to do is talk," she said. "We women have something to offer."

J. W. Shira, Ravenna, O., manufacturer of toy balloons, claimed quite a distinction among his articulate fellow conferees.

"I am not advocating anything," he said.

Susan G. Gill, vivacious beauty shop operator of Narbeth, Pa., said those attending the meeting "were acting like children."

"I'd just like to be the mother of that group for 15 minutes," she said.

N. E. Council Director Cites Inflation Threat

WASHINGTON, Feb. 2 (AP)—Albert E. Noelte, a director of the New England Council from Pawtucket, R. I., told Secretary Roper's conference of small business men today "the business of all New England is wrapped up in the economic welfare of that region, the cradle of the American factory system."

Noeltre read to the assembly from a brief which he had submitted to Secretary Roper covering all phases of the economic situation.

His analysis concluded with this statement:

"Inflation is a threat, because of continued deficits in government spending. With unemployment expenditures increasing an unprecedented national debt is created, with advancing debts for municipal and state governments.

"A bewildered people are trying to interpret the confusing issues that are being made daily. American industry has before it the greatest challenge since its inception."

Noelte declared "there is no apparent shortage of commercial credit for prudent use in New England."

As Four Priests Took Final Vows

Four priests took their final vows in the Society of Jesus today before 500 relatives and friends at St. Mary's Church, North End. The four priests, Rev. Lawrence M. Brock, S. J., of Charlestown, Rev. Charles P. Kenney, S. J., of Roxbury, Rev. Joseph C. Moynihan, S. J., of Worcester, and Rev. Leo Welch, S. J., of Rochester, N. Y., are shown left to right. Previously they had individually knelt on the altar steps and vowed poverty, chastity and obedience.

4 Jesuit Priests Take Final Vows at St. Mary's

An impressive ceremony, unchanged in a single detail for more than 400 years, was performed today as four priests took their final vows in the Society of Jesus at St. Mary's Church in the North End.

The vows were exactly the same as those taken on August 15, 1534, at Mont Montre, Paris, by St. Francis Xavier.

As the saint did in the medieval 16th century setting, the four priests each knelt on the altar steps to vow poverty, chastity and obedience.

Each signed last wills and testaments disposing of all present and future worldly possessions and offering themselves to the church.

Several years ago they took simple vows in private. Today's final pledges were made publicly, with more than 500 relatives and friends in attendance to witness the ceremonies and hear the novena mass of the vows, celebrated by the Rev. Leo A. Dore, S. J., superior at St. Mary's.

The priests were the Rev. Lawrence M. Brock, S. J., of Charlestown; the Rev. Joseph C. Moynihan, S. J., of Worcester; the Rev. Charles P. Kenney, S. J., of Roxbury, and the Rev. Leo G. Welch, S. J., of Rochester, N. Y.

'Honey Fitz' 75th Fete Next Week

JOHN F. FITZGERALD

John F. Fitzgerald, former mayor of Boston and one of this city's best-known citizens, will be 75 years old on February 11.

Three days before that date, on next Tuesday, the Advertising Club of Boston will give him a birthday party luncheon, the club announced today.

Fitzgerald has been a member of the club since 1910. He will be the principal speaker at the luncheon.

Oliver M. Drummond, chairman of the program, has announced that there will be no serious business forecasts or recasts.

The party, he has explained, is simply to say, "Happy birthday to you" to "Honey" Fitzgerald, singing mayor who won no little renown for his renderings of "Sweet Adeline."

The former mayor, who is one of the Port Authorities, will also be given a party on his birthday anniversary by a group of friends and associates at the Chamber of Commerce offices. City Councillor Clement A. Norton is chairman and Frank S. Davis, manager of the Chamber's Maritime Association, treasurer of the arrangements committee.

U. S. 'Sympathy' For Jews Cited

WASHINGTON, Feb. 2 (INS)—The state department is giving "sympathetic consideration" to the plight of Jews in Rumania but policy precludes its direct intervention in this Rumanian internal affair, Secretary Hull informed the House Foreign Affairs Committee.

Accepting Hull's statement as satisfactory, the committee voted to report adversely a resolution by Rep. Fish (R.) of New York requiring the department to disclose what steps it contemplated, if any, on behalf of persecuted Rumanian Jews.

Women's Pardon Question Puzzle

Dr. Miriam Van Waters, superintendent of the State Reformatory for Women at Sherborn, couldn't answer this question—"Why aren't women prisoners pardoned as men prisoners?"

Meeting with the "Friends of Prisoners" on Joy street, the reformatory head admitted she didn't know why, except that women prison inmates might not "have friends to push their cases as men do." In place of pardons, she pointed out, women prisoners are indentured in homes under supervision of the State.

Italian Troopships Speed to Ethiopia

PORT SAID, Feb 2 (INS)—Troop transport ships today rushed Italian reinforcements to Ethiopia, where widespread native uprisings against Abyssinia's Fascist overlords have been reported.

Officials state that transport vessels are now passing by Port Said and through the Suez Canal as frequently as they did during the early stages of the Ethiopian war.

Steady, Harvard! Hold Those Spoons: Eat It Up!

Challengers, cheers, advice and wrath were pouring in today upon Harvard's three ice-cream eating aces from all parts of the country.

Some letters coming from health authorities expressed anger and sympthay, while other letters from students in other colleges revealed that the Crimson ice-cream eaters have plenty of ambitious rivals.

The Harvard champs are David "Kentucky" Mitchell, with a record of 16 plates, Homer "Killer" Peabody with 19, and Robert E. Rogers, of Chicago, who has downed 24 heaping plates just like nobody's business.

The president of a large food corporation wrote a bit indignantly:

"I would like to meet your three kings and crown them vigorously—eating ice-cream, of all things.

"If they must gorge, they might at least stuff themselves with something healthful, like our wheat wafers, for instance. We will gladly donate the wafers!"

A Princeton student, Walter Drill, of Elizabeth, New Jersey, sent an open challenge to all Harvard men.

"Harvard men may exceed in the sport of ice-cream eating," he sneered. "But this sort of thing has long been regarded as effeminate at Princeton.

"I challenge all you Harvard lads to a joust in the manly art of peanut-buttering. Who will stand at my right hand and gulp as much peanut butter as I?"

Will Salvage Part Of Niagara Bridge

NIAGARA FALLS, N. Y., Feb. 2—The dangerous task of salvaging 100,000 pounds of copper wire and other metals from the fallen "Honeymoon Bridge" will be attempted today by a Buffalo junk dealer.

The wire comprises several hundred feet of telegraph, telephone and power lines dragged down when an ice jam collapsed the bridge.

Buckley Hurls Asylum Probe At Hurley

State Auditor Tells Governor to "Finish Job"

Hurley as opponents in the next gubernatorial race.

The auditor, it was learned, ten days ago had demanded that the Governor act to clean up the situation in the mental hospitals disclosed during his check of the institution books.

Among these disclosures were eight violent deaths, numerous suicides and alleged widespread fraud in the financial management of the hospitals.

Today the Governor was handed the report of Dr. Clifton T. Perkins, acting head of the State Department of Mental Diseases, on 128 deaths from other than natural causes occurring in the institutions last year.

In a direct challenge to the Governor, Buckley declared that the only "tangible result of all his reports was the slashing of $50,000 from the institutional food budget and asserted:

"Every other recommendation I have made has apparently been ignored."

CALLS FOR ACTION

Pointing out that his duties restrict him only to checking conditions and do not allow him to act upon them, the auditor stated:

"I have called conditions at State mental institutions to the attention of Governor Hurley. I have done all I can do by disclosing these conditions to the citizens of Massachusetts and recommended action by proper governmental agencies. I have no power now to take that action.

"It is immaterial to me what governmental agency corrects these conditions.

"What the patients, their relatives and the citizens of Massachusetts demand is action."

He asserted that he uncovered the "appalling situations" now being investigated by delving "below the surface" of ordinary reports submitted to him in the ordinary course of auditing.

In two separate memorandums to the Governor, according to the auditor, these conditions were called to Hurley's attention nearly a year ago.

HURLEY HOLDS PARLEY

Meanwhile, the "conference" called by Governor Hurley ended after a 30-minute session attended by the chief executive, Public Safety Commissioner Eugene M. McSweeney, Chairman Patrick J. Moynihan of the State Commission on Administration and Finance, and Judge John F. Perkins, head of a special commission which recently made a survey of the hospitals.

No definite action on the situation was taken.

Declaring he had intended no snub to Buckley by not inviting him to the meeting, Governor Hurley dismissed the auditor with the remark:

"His duty is that of auditor. Chairman Moynihan's duty is to make the improvements necessary'."

The Governor two days ago "took over" the probe when he ordered Moynihan to assume full charge.

He declared that today's parley was called for the chief purpose of introducing Moynihan and McSweeney to Judge Perkins. The Governor said that the judge would call another conference of the entire personnel of the special commission in a day or two.

Moynihan, who yesterday visited the Boston State Hospital, said that as yet "I am just feeling my way." He will visit the hospital again today.

Jury Bribe Try Causes Mistrial

An alleged attempt to bribe a juror today had resulted in a mistrial of an automobile case in Middlesex superior civil court.

The case was one in which three plaintiffs sought damages from Philip Maio of South Barre for alleged injuries received in an accident. When a juror reported to the court he had been approached by a man who intimated he would pay money for his jury vote, Judge Frederick B. Greenhalge declared a mistrial.

Timilty Orders Big Crime Drive

850 More Police Pressed Into Service To Patrol All City Streets

the following order to the captain of each division today:

"Within the past month there has been a large increase in the number of serious crimes in the city of Boston.

WIDE DRIVE PLANNED

"This presents a problem necessitating effective action by police of this department in order to efficiently combat the criminal element in this city.

"I am, therefore, directed by the police commissioner to make the following details effective forthwith until further orders:

"(All to wear civilian clothes.)

"Day officers attached to the several divisions shall report to their respective commanding officers at 5 p. m. daily for duty until 12 midnight, patrolling the streets.

(This affects officers who ordinarily complete their day's work at 5:45 p. m.)

"Long-day men shall report to their commanding officer at 12 noon daily for duty until 6 p. m. patrolling the streets.

(Long-day men work from 5:45 p. m. until midnight.)

CALLS TRAFFIC MEN

"Officers attached to the traffic division on day duty shall report to the commanding officer of the division in accordance with the following schedule:

"Two lieutenants, 11 sergeants and 170 patrolmen will report to the North End, Milk street, West End, South End, Roxbury, Dorchester, Jamaica Plain, Brighton, Charlestown, West Roxbury and Mattapan stations."

The superintendent explained that 20 of these men would be assigned to the North End station and 15 each to the Roxbury, Dorchester, Jamaica Plain and Back Bay stations.

Smaller "traffic" groups will be assigned to the other stations, he explained.

The rest of the "extra" force, numbering more than 650, he stated, will be "distributed over the entire city."

Asked by newspapermen if any groups will be concentrated in particular areas, he replied:

"No, the situation is general. We've had a holdup near the North Station, holdups in Charlestown, handbag snatching in Back Bay and a woman held up in Roslindale.

"This seems to call for action," he added.

Fallon said that the "rackets" bureau at headquarters would be kept open all night.

He reiterated Commissioner Timilty's order that all suspicious persons would be rounded up.

Questionable characters will be quizzed and searched, he said, and "brought in."

All-night gathering places, known to be frequented by so-called "undesirables," will be kept under close surveillance, Superintendent Fallon declared.

He said that orders would be given the officers to keep a strict watch on reported stolen cars.

"I'll be on the street every night myself," Fallon declared.

He said that he had ordered the captain of every division to be "on the street" during this drive.

He also declared that Deputy Superintendent James R. Claflin, head of the detective bureau, would "be out with his squad."

EXPLAINS MOVE

In a statement following Superintendent Fallon's announcement, Commissioner Timilty declared he wanted to "bring out one point"—that the general public need have no fear since today's move was "in the nature of a preventive action."

"The action was taken following a conference between the superintendent and myself," he said. "We noted the alarming increase of petty crimes.

"We're meeting the situation before it actually occurs. Nothing here has reached major proportions."

Commissioner Timilty's "roundup" order followed last night's holdup in which three bandits kidnaped a doctor, stole his car, robbed a milk firm of $700 and then eluded 20 police cruising cars and 50 police officers in a chase through four cities.

Reports of the police shakeup came with the revelation that Superintendent Fallon had yesterday summoned captains of various divisions to his office and verbally lashed them for "insubordination and neglect of duty."

SHAKEUP HINTED

Open "splits" between captains and sergeants in their own divisions were disclosed at this meeting, it was learned.

Queried specifically by Superintendent Fallon concerning recent holdups, breaks and handbag snatchings on their divisions, several captains openly accused sergeants of "lying down on their job" by not "keeping after" the patrolmen under them.

The police superintendent was understood to have told these captains:

"Sergeants aren't any different from patrolmen and shouldn't be as far as you're concerned. You should hold them responsible for the patrolmen."

Beat Woman, Rob Safe as Drive Opens

Even as police announced its most drastic "crime drive" in 20 years, an ill, 45-year-old Mattapan woman was beaten by two bandits and robbed of $44.50 and a $250 safe break was reported in Brighton today.

Confined to her bed, Mrs. Ida Goldstein of American Legion highway, Mattapan, was surprised by the two thugs, one of whom was armed, who stripped her of her rings. The money was taken from her purse as one of the bandits punched the woman.

Collection envelopes containing $250 were taken from a safe in the office of the C. G. Howes Company, cleaners, Braintree street, Brighton, during the night.

Think Chandler Plans to Run

FRANKFORT, Ky., Feb. 2 (AP)—Governor A. B. "Happy" Chandler was welcomed back from Washington today by state employes and Frankfort citizens who cheered him and presented him with flowers. He gave them no definite word as to whether he would oppose U. S. Senator Alben W. Barkley for re-election.

The governor said he probably would announce his decision in a few days. Newspapermen said they gathered from his conversation he would enter the Democratic primary against Barkley.

Of his White House conference about Kentucky politics, Chandler said President Roosevelt pointed out he was young and had plenty of time, and added, "I reminded him that he didn't wait himself."

"I wasn't bluffed and wasn't scared," added Chandler. "I told him I was from Harvard, too." Chandler attended Harvard in 1921-22.

AFL in Bay State Fights Navy Plan

WASHINGTON, Feb. 2 (AP)—The Massachusetts Federation of Labor notified New England congressmen today it was opposed to the reopening of a torpedo station at Alexandria, Va., as provided in the naval appropriations bill passed by the House.

In a letter to Representative Martin (R.) of Massachusetts, Kenneth I. Taylor, secretary-treasurer of the federation, said reopening of the Virginia plant "probably will result in closing the torpedo station at Newport, R. I., and involve loss of an approximate payroll of $6,000,000 in New England."

Tobin, Ex-Mayor In Old Harbor Tax Clash

Assessors Scored On South Boston Project Listing

Mayor Tobin and former Mayor Mansfield were definitely at odds today, particularly over tax rights in Old Harbor Village.

Mayor Mansfield struck at the new mayor after the latter had charged the last administration with deliberate misrepresentation of the city's financial condition.

Mayor Tobin charged that the board of assessors had juggled figures by listing the big South Boston housing project as assessed for $2,000,000 and a $77,000 tax asset.

Defending the action, the former mayor declared the city's right to tax the Federal project is still "a wide open and debatable question."

BACKS UP ASSESSORS

Mansfield said he had not consulted the assessors when they did their work but that "they were entirely right" in listing it as a $77,000 asset.

Henry E. Foley, former head of the city law department, backed up his former boss in the opinion that the city has taxable rights in the housing project.

Foley pointed out that several cases are pending in the courts of other states on this question and advised that the property should be offered for sale this spring if the government does not pay its tax. He said such action would bring the matter to a head for final settlement.

ASSAILS LISTING

Mayor Tobin, however, declared that it has been clearly established that the federal housing projects are not taxable and that only service charges could be collected from the government.

He added that the listing was done to create a false impression of the city's finances.

2 Girls, 3 Boys Hurt in Crash

BROCKTON, Feb. 2—Two 16-year-old girls and three companions of the same age were nursing injuries today following an accident in which their car turned over three times and crashed into a tree on Field Parkway. All escaped serious injury.

Vivian Nebitt, North Manchester street, Lottie Daruski, East Battle street, and Jackie Tarenteau, Gary street, all Brockton, were treated and released at Brockton hospital. Anthony Kazulee, Spring street, Stoughton, driver of the car, and John Klin, Clapp street, Stoughton, were treated at Goddard hospital.

John Curley Gains In Florida Illness

With former Governor Curley en route to Florida to be at the bedside of his brother, John J. Curley, ex-city treasurer of Boston, was reported much improved at his home in Coral Gables today.

The former governor is expected to arrive late today. Last rites of the church were administered to Curley Monday and since that time he has been under an oxygen tent. He is ill with penumonia.

Court Action Seen In Lottery Sales

Grand jury action was seen as a possibility today against New Englanders connected with the shipment here of Cuban lottery tickets, as postal inspectors continued their drive to stop the flow of illegal mail.

Phoebe Hearst Legion Post Hears Arms Plea

NEW YORK, Feb. 2 (AP)—Declaring that the wars in Spain and China demonstrate that the most dangerous arm of a country's fighting machine is its air service, Attorney-General Bennett last night urged an air defense force second to none for the United States.

Addressing a meeting of the Phoebe Apperson Hearst Memorial Post, American Legion, Bennett advocated government subcidy for commercial airports for wartime reserve and special military training for the country's 1700 commercial pilots.

He praised the Junior Birdmen of America, pointing out that it was an organization bringing airmindedness to American youth.

"In that way," he said, "it is performing a great American service."

Bennett also commended the work of the Legion in providing hospitalization for World War veterans, especially the camp at Tupper Lake, N. Y. The endowment fund for the camp and hospital now totals $465,000, he said, and when it reaches $1,000,000 it will be able to care for 400 veterans the year around.

Arthur Pfrommer, commander of the post, presided, and announced that from a charter membership of 55 when it was founded last December 15, the post now has 310 members, with more applications still to be considered.

Executive committeemen named for three years were: W. J. Hagerman, M. J. Radican and Joseph V. Connolly; for two years, Peter Carroll, Kent Hunter and H. J. Strickler, and for one year, T. E. J. Crowley, Robert Mattfeld and W. K. Seeley.

E. V. Rickenbacker was named trustee for three years; S. F. Miller, two years, and John Gagin, one year. J. Mullaney was appointed delegate to the county committee.

School Boy, 12, Gone Two Days

Cambridge Mother Asks Police Aid

William Murphy of Windsor street, Cambridge, 12-year-old student at St. Mary's parochial school, has been missing from home since noon Monday, his mother informed police today.

Mrs. Murphy stated that she delayed in reporting his disappearance because she thought he had played hookey from school and was afraid to come home. When he did not appear today, however, she became worried.

William is described as five feet two inches tall and weighing 108 pounds. He is of light complexion, with dark brown curly hair and brown eyes. When last seen he was wearing blue knickers, blue zipper jacket, black hat, and high shoes.

AFL and CIO Split On Wagner Act

MIAMI, Fla., Feb. 2 (AP)—Another major split between the American Federation of Labor and the Committee for Industrial Organization developed today over a proposal to amend the Wagner Labor Relations Act.

The AFL executive council endorsed a change that would insure the members of craft unions within an industry the right to elect their own representatives for collective bargaining. The AFL will press for enactment of the amendment at this session of Congress.

The United Mine Workers, of which John L. Lewis is president, voted unanimously at their Washington convention yesterday to oppose any change in the act.

So eager are AFL officials for immediate enactment of the amendment that they oppose any Senate investigation of the NLRB at this time, fearing a protracted inquiry would delay the legislation, although they criticize the labor board for alleged partisanship toward the CIO.

Burton Sees Cleveland Jobless at Record High

Unemployment in Cleveland, O., is now the worst in that city's history, according to the mayor, Harold H. Burton, former Bostonian, who is visiting here.

Returning to his native heath for the first visit in a number of years, Burton was smiling and cheerful generally, but given to tongue-clucking when he thought of the "recession."

He came here to attend last night's meeting of the alumni of Bowdoin College, of which he is a member, and to be guest of honor of the Boston Rotary Club at Hotel Statler today.

"In September last year we had 93,000 unemployed," he explained as he sat in the office of Mayor Tobin.

"On January 6, we had 181,000. We have a good deal of manufacturing and building trades in Cleveland (nearly 48 per cent of our employed work in them) and they were very badly hit by the recession.

"We hope for an upturn now. Steel showed an increase for the first quarter of this year."

In Cleveland, he explained, smiling at the reference to Boston's similar trouble, the Federal Housing project pays no taxes, but a $15,000 annual "service charge" which about equals the tax the city used to get on the vacant land.

Burton was born in Jamaica Plain in 1888, was graduated from Newton High School and Bowdoin College, served in the World War and then went West to practise law.

America pays tribute to a distinguished Bostonian

JOHN SINGLETON COPLEY

1738-1815

Two centuries ago John Singleton Copley was born in Boston. His rise to preeminence as a painter was sensational.

By his middle twenties Copley's leadership was established and he settled down to a gracious and prosperous career. In his early thirties he had married and was maintaining his studio in a mansion house facing the open Common on Beacon Hill. His brilliant conversation and courtly manner made him a leader in the society of the day. The skillful strokes of his brush brought to canvas immortal likenesses of Dr. Tyng, John Hancock, John Gray, Samuel Adams and John Quincy Adams.

Indeed, his popularity and good fortune were so pronounced that by 1773 his land holdings had increased to eighteen acres bounded by the Charles River, Beacon Street, Pinckney Street and Louisburg Square.

A portrait which he had forwarded anonymously to a London exhibition was so enthusiastically received that, on the advice of his friend, Benjamin West, he left Boston in 1774 at the age of thirty-five to enter into a long and distinguished career in London.

The current Copley exhibition at Boston's Museum of Fine Arts represents the largest collection of his works ever brought together. It includes sixty oil paintings, twenty pastels and ten miniatures done in America as well as examples of his paintings and drawings produced in London. In this, the two hundredth anniversary of Copley's birth, we join in the nation's tribute to the honor of this distinguished Bostonian.

WHY FALSE TEETH WEARERS HAVE BAD BREATH

Millions Suffer Without Knowing!

You can't notice any odor from your plate or bridge—but others can! Dentists call this odor "denture breath" and it's serious. It comes from a mucin-scum that collects on plates and bridges. This scum is almost invisible—but it can make your breath so bad that friends shudder. It can breed decay-bacteria that infect your other teeth, actually hurt your health and spoil your pleasure.

Ordinary brushing can't get this scum off plate or bridge—can't protect you against "denture breath." But just try Polident! Polident not only cleans—it actually purifies plates and bridges without brushing. It gets every bit of scum, tarnish, stain and odor—dissolves it away and leaves your plate sweet and clean as new.

Your breath will be fresher, your mouth feel cleaner—and your plate last longer and look better. Polident is approved by dental authorities, Good Housekeeping and tens of thousands of delighted users. Long-lasting can costs only 30¢ at any drug store.

POLIDENT
Cleans, Purifies Like Magic

Put plate or bridge in ½ glass of water. Add a little Polident powder. Leave in 10 to 15 minutes—rinse—and it's sweet and purified—ready to use!

Bundle Day for Thrift Shop Will Be Held Tomorrow

By BETTY ALDEN

IN SPITE of annual spring cleanings, treasure hunts and the innumerable demands made upon them by rummage sales, Back Bay attics and storerooms seem to yield an endless supply of books, china, shoes . . . and all sorts of old but usable articles when bundle day rolls around . . .

Tomorrow members of the ladies' committee for Trinity Neighborhood House are holding a bundle day for the benefit of the Thrift Shop . . . and because the Thrift Shop is blocked by the subway construction on Huntington avenue, Mrs. William O. Taylor is having the party at her Beacon street home, from 3:30 to 5:30 in the afternoon . . .

POLLY WARDWELL

And so the members of the committee, as well as kind friends who are interested in the work of the Thrift Shop, will go to 187 Beacon street and stack their bundles in the reception hall before going into the pleasant dining room for a cup of tea and a friendly chat . . .

The Thrift Shop, where you can buy a great variety of usable articles, from clothes to knickknacks for the house, helps to support seven worthwhile charitable agencies . . . of which the Trinity Neighborhood House is one . . .

Committee members helping to make tomorrow's tea party a success are Mrs. Philip Stockton, Mrs. Richard C. Curtis, Miss Agnes G. Brooks, Mrs. George Clymer, Mrs. James Jackson, Mrs. George W. W. Brewster, Mrs. Charles G. Mixter, Mrs. Alexander Whiteside and, of course, the hostess, Mrs. William O. Taylor . . .

Betty Dumaine Off on Southern Cruise

SKIING AND THE PINEY TANG of the northern woods, borne on a crisp and frosty wind, are certainly very appealing . . . but there are still a lot of people . . . (and, we must admit, we are inclined to accept their point of view) . . . who prefer to wriggle their bare, sunbaked toes in the warm sands of southern beaches . . . or rest comfortably in the shade of a deck awning aboard a yacht cruising lazily in tropical waters . . .

To our mind this is far the nicer work . . . if you can get it! . . .

Betty Dumaine, daughter of Mrs. Frederic C. Dumaine of Brookline, has tried her hand at both . . . The last two winters she went up into the New Hampshire hills on several of the Alteburges' and Hochgebirges' expeditions . . . and was even chosen queen of a snow carnival one week-end . . .

Now she is cruising in tropical waters with Mr. and Mrs. William Larimer Mellon of Pittsburgh, Pa. . . . The yachting party weighed anchor yesterday and set sail from Miami aboard the Mellons' yacht, Vagabondia . . .

The yacht is appropriately named for it is taking its passengers on a three-month cruise to quaint and varied ports on the South American continent . . .

Polly Wardwell Plans for Wedding

WHILE BETTY has been a guest aboard the Vagabondia helping with last-minute preparations for the cruise, her mother has also been enjoying a seagoing existence aboard the Arcadia, Mrs. Huntington Reed Hardwick's yacht . . .

In Mrs. Hardwick's absence, her mother, Mrs. Galen Stone of Brookline has been hostess aboard the Arcadia and among other guests aboard are Peggy Hardwick and Mildred Rogers of Brookline . . . Polly Wardwell has been down there, too, resting in preparation for her wedding on the 23d of this month . . . but she has returned to Brookline for the final fittings and parties before the great day when she becomes Mrs. Chauncey Keep . . .

Others prominent in Miami's yachting colony are General Cornelius Vanderbilt, who has as his guest aboard the yacht Winchester, General John F. O'Ryan of New York . . . and Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Fisher of Detroit are aboard their yacht . . . Mr. and Mrs. David C. Whitney of Grosse Point, Mr. and Mrs. J. Burr Bartram of Greenwich, Commander and Mrs. Eugene F. McDonald, Jr., of Chicago, and Mr. and Mrs. William Leeds of New York, are all absorbing sunshine and vitamins aboard their pleasure craft in Miami's beautiful harbor . . .

Mrs. H. M. Pratt of Boston entertained at a luncheon bridge at the Venetian Hotel yesterday afternoon and among her guests were Mrs. William Snyder and her house guest, Mrs. Arthur W. Banfield, Mrs. Mary Halliday of Brookline, Mrs. Elizabeth Smith, Mrs. George Van Winkle, Miss Gertrude Williams and Mrs. Hadley Lamb . . .

Notes From a Society Editor's Notebook

THE GIRLS who are often accused of liking skiing because they enjoy wearing colorful ski costumes, would envy Mrs. Richard S. Scott, the former Caroline Hunnewell, who is now living in New York . . . One of her several jobs is modeling ski togs for a fashionable New York store . . . Her picture, wearing ski trousers and a stunning hooded jacket of fluffy white mountain goat, appears in the latest issue of Town and Country . . . Caroline also garners a few extra portions of that elusive green pocketbook lining by selling perfume . . . Nevertheless, in addition to these activities, she and her husband still find time to get away week-ends for actual workouts on the skiing slopes of New Hampshire and Vermont . . . Caroline is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Hunnewell of Beacon Hill and enjoyed the reputation, in her debutante and post deb days, of being one of Boston's best dressed girls . . .

The Parents' League of Boston has issued invitations to a lecture on Tuesday evening, February 15, in the State Suite of the Copley-Plaza . . . Mr. Perry Dunlap Smith, headmaster of the North Shore Country Day School of Winnetka, Illinois, will address fashionable Boston fathers and mothers on the provocative subject, "Are Parents Necessary?"

Quoddy Project Father Dies

Dexter P. Cooper, 67, world-famous engineer who conceived the Passamaquoddy Tidal project, died today of a heart attack at his home, 261 Beacon street, Back Bay.

For many years Cooper sought to interest Canada and the United States in a project to harness the racing tides of the Bay of Fundy. His plans were half approved when the United States accepted a compromise program by building a tide-power dam at Passamaquoddy bay.

Mr. Cooper is survived by his widow and three children, Dexter, Jr., 16; Elizabeth, 21, and Nancy, 24.

Forty dollars in cash prizes and 25 pair of theater tickets will be awarded to those who can correctly name the titles of former Dolores Del Rio pictures from which the scenes were taken. The first of these will appear in tomorrow's issue.

"International Settlement" is a thrilling romantic drama which deals with the adventures of a freelance American pilot who finds himself in China's great metropolis as the city is engulfed in the maelstrom of conflict.

Further complications come about when he seeks romance with the most glamorous and dangerous white woman in all China.

Watch for tomorrow's Boston American with the first picture to be identified.

Most Women Don't Need Beauty Parlors

Sallow complexions and pimply skins are often not a matter for cosmetics. For most skin blemishes are aggravated by constipation.

Constipation can be a serious handicap. Mental dullness, early fatigue, headaches, sleeplessness, mental depression, loss of appetite, hyper-acidity can all be caused by it.

Keep regular. If more than a day goes by, use Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets. This famous laxative is the choice of millions. It does not shock the intestinal system. And in addition, it stimulates the secretion of bile without the discomfort of drastic or irritating drugs. Get Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets at your druggist, 15¢, 30¢ and 60¢.

Cars Look Gay, Drivers Glum

4-Inch Red Stripes Punish Offenders

SANTA ANA, Cal., Feb. 3 (AP)—Four-inch red stripes on automobiles mean something in Orange county.

They are Superior Judge James L. Allen's idea of punishing reckless drivers.

Judge Allen started the plan last November.

Since then he has pronounced the sentence as a probation requirement in many cases of drunken, reckless or hit-and-run driving.

Probationers are forbidden to park within 300 feet of any place where liquor is sold.

Judge Allen today expressed gratification over the success of his plan and added:

"If they are ashamed to drive their conspicuous machines, they can stay home."

Begs New Hunt For Daughter

A worried Cambridge mother today begged police to redouble their efforts in search for her 16-year-old daughter, missing since Monday afternoon.

A check-up all day yesterday with the missing girl's chums and relatives in and around Cambridge was futile. She did not attend classes at Cambridge High and Latin school, where she is a freshman.

She is five feet four inches tall, weighs 105 pounds, has brown hair, brown eyes, and medium complexion. She wore a dark hat with veil, light brown coat with fur collar, red and blue checked dress, and black pumps.

'Wine of Choice' Opens Monday At Wilbur

S. N. Behrman, after having presented the Theater Guild with his adaptation of "Amphitryon, '38," which with the Lunts, Alfred and Lynn, is one of the first successes of the current season in New York, has turned over to that same organization his latest play, "Wine of Choice," which is to be played for two weeks at the Wilbur Theater beginning Monday evening. This is the sixth Behrman play offered the Theater Guild, the other five having been among the happiest of Guild's successes.

Partly, the title refers to the difficulty of the heroine in making choice among her suitors. The wit of the Behrman men is said to be too beguiling to her to hold her to one suitor long in preference to another.

The English stage star, Leslie Banks, admired for his clever performance in "Springtime for Henry" and familiar to patrons of both American and English motion pictures, Claudia Morgan, one of the more brilliant and attractive of younger actresses on the Broadway stage, Theodore Newton, forceful actor on both the stage and screen, Donald Cook, more recently of Hollywood fame, and Herbert Yost, Paul Stewart and Akihiko Yoshiwara likewise known both to picture fans and stage lovers compose an unusually distinguished cast.

First Lecture by Griggs Saturday

At the Uptown

"A Damsel in Distress," with Fred Astaire, George Burns and Gracie Allen in the top roles, is the Uptown's feature offering for the week starting Friday.

"Crashing Hollywood," with Lee Tracy in the starring role, is the companion feature.

Gives Concert Sunday

Kirsten Flagstad, who gives her only Boston concert in Symphony Hall, assisted by Edwin McArthur as pianist.

Kirsten Flagstad, celebrated as the greatest living Wagnerian soprano, will make her only Boston concert appearance of the season Sunday afternoon at Symphony Hall.

The Norwegian prima donna, with the assistance of Pianist Edwin McArthur, will sing the following numbers:

Niagara Bridge's Crash Filmed

The actual collapse of the Niagara Bridge, one of the season's most novel and interesting newsreel "scoops," is contained in the current newsreel at South Station Theater.

After conferring with the technical engineers at the bridge, who had estimated the tensile strength of the bridge's construction as compared with the increasing weight of the river's ice, the camerman stationed himself at a vantage point. After waiting patiently for some time he was rewarded with the excellent scenes of the actual crash.

PROFESSOR ROBERT E. ROGERS, the scholar's viewpoint expressed every day (except Saturdays) in his column, "This Is Life," in the Boston Evening American.

Violet Heming Collects Real Estate as Hobby

Hobbies of famous people, and more especially of actors, are often trivial. Violet Heming, featured as the glamorous divorcee of "Yes, My Darling Daughter," the comedy hit at the Plymouth Theater, becomes an exception to a general rule. Miss Heming's hobby, it seems, is collecting real estate.

At present, this glamorous thespian is the owner of an island in the St. Lawrence River region of Canada. If our neighboring government ever makes up a new map of its possessions, it will have to call them the "Nine Hundred and Ninety-Nine Islands," for among the famous Thousand Islands there is now one for which the deed is signed, sealed and in Violet Heming's possession under the title "Heming's Island."

The nearest mainland town is called Gananoque, if you know where that is. She didn't, says Miss Heming, until a government official escorted her there. Her taxes, she boasts, are all of 72 cents per annum.

"I have a passion for owning land," says Miss Heming. "After a play has run a long time, I like the luxury of resting on my own soil before I begin rehearsing again. But my island is so far away. Since "Yes, My Darling Daughter is such a hit, it may be a long time before I can rest away fro mthe theater."

Miss Heming, who plays the glamorous divorcee, and Nicholas Joy, who acts as the suave literary agent in "Yes, My Darling Daughter," are the guests of honor at a luncheon held by the Women's City Club of Boston at the clubhouse today.

Mr. Joy will address the luncheon meeting, his topic being "Behind the Footlights."

Night lieutenants of the Special Service Squad have been ordered to ride in cruising cars . . . A clerk is now in charge of the S. S. headquarters while the loo-eys are out in the cold . . . Benny Field has stopped going to fights, he says, because it's the same old story—set-ups and setups . . . No sales tax this year for Massachusetts, with odds of 20-1 to support the belief . . . It's election year . . . Horatio "Pop" Ruggles, septuagenarian door-tender of the Mayfair, celebrates his birthday today coincident with the groundhog's annual chore of seeing his shadow—if any.

Republican leaders are trying to persuade City Councillor Robert Gardiner Wilson, Jr., to run for the nomination for lieutenant-governor . . . Scores of friends of Lieutenant-Governor Francis E. Kelly have taken umbrage at this column's dismissal of the Dorchester man's chances for the governorship if New Deal support backs Governor Hurley . . . Kelly beat Philbin, who had administration support in the last election . . . And Kelly beat Saltonstall, who will be the probable G. O. P. nominee for governor, the Kelly-ites point out . . . A bill requiring workmen's compensation in so-called hazardous industries will get strong support in the Legislature this session.

THE COLONEL GOT IT RIGHT:

It seems a New York matron was welcoming home her daughter, who was entertaining 30 of her friends from an exclusive finishing school for a week-end . . . The fond mama had made arrangements with a neighboring armory to furnish escorts for a dancing party, or so the story goes . . . But Mama had stipulated in a conversation with the colonel that no Jewish boys should be included.

Came the night of the dance, and the line of khaki-garbed escorts arrived at the matron's palatial home . . . The lads wore their dress uniforms and looked as if they had just passed inspection . . . But they were all the color of the night . . . The startled hostess recovered sufficiently to gasp: "Goodness, there must have been a mistake!" But the young man in charge of the detail set her straight at once.

"No, madame," he assured her, "There has been no mistake. Colonel Ginsberg never makes a mistake."

ONCE OVER LIGHTLY:

Organizers are in town to annex the members of the Boston Theatrical Treasurers Club (and box-office workers who aren't members) to the Theatrical Managers, Agents and Treasurers Union, A. F. of L. . . . Meanwhile there's a merry misunderstanding between this organization and members of the New York Theatrical Press Agents . . . A member of each group argued it out in this office for what seemed a whole first act . . . 75 friends of Everett's Mayor Lewis will honor him at a private dinner March 17 at Dinty Moore's . . . Former Fire Commissioner Edward F. McLaughlin will be given a reception and banquet February 9 at the Bradford . . . What about Teachers' College? is what many are thinking, Mr. Mayor.

Claire Nevulls, one of the stars of the cast of "When a Cabot Loves a Kelly" will sing with Bob Hardy's orchestra at El Morocco tomorrow night . . . Ben Ginsberg, home from Florida (and a vision in camel's hair—with cap, sweater, muffler and overcoat of the popular material) coped with an emergency at his Dempsey's Vanderbilt supperroom in Miami last Saturday . . . The resort's lights were out for an hour and a half at the height of the revelry . . . More than a score of cars were used to flood the room with their headlights . . . And not one single customer walked out without paying the check . . . Francis Renault, the female impersonator, will not female impersonate tonight at the Famous Door, as scheduled . . . Francis went through the windshield of his car driving toward Boston, suffering abrasions . . . He'll appear when recovered.

The Association of Restaurant Proprietors will meet tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock to plan the next moves in the campaign to get legislation for a later curfew . . . Candidates in the race for sheriff at the next election will include State Senators Edward C. Carroll and Joseph Donahue, City Councillor John F. Dowd, Captain David J. Brickley, former city councillor and Legion of Valor man, and Francis A. McLaughlin, who was a campaign manager for former Governor Curley.

The stork has visited the home of the Charles Rochets . . . He's the manager of the Fox and Hounds Club, and his so-good looking wife is the former Mildred Dwyer of Watertown, baby girl, the arrival is their first.

New Role For Bette Davis

Faith Baldwin Story To Be Produced By Warners

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS

Motion Picture Editor, International News Service

(Copyright, 1938, by International News Service)

HOLLYWOOD, Feb. 2 — Faith Baldwin's widely read story, "Comet Over Broadway," is Bette Davis' next movie.

Louella O. Parsons

After a six-week vacation, during which time she will go to the desert and fix up her new Coldwater Canyon hacienda, Bette will check in at the Warner studio to play a heroine, not unlike that in "Dangerous," which won her the Academy Award. Mark Hellinger has written the script and Benjamin Glazer will produce.

You needn't be surprised if, after Bette finishes "Comet Over Broadway," she moves to Paramount on loanout to star in Dr. Cronin's novel, "Hatter's Castle." Bette would be perfect as the tragedy stricken heroine. But, of course, there's a little borrowing arrangement involved. In return for Bette, Paramount would be expected to lend Warners Bing Crosby to star in "Garden of the Moon."

Just when we've shouted ourselves hoarse telling people they have no chance in Hollywood and to please, please keep their children at home, something like this has to happen! Mrs. T. S. Mankertz, of Salem, Oregon, heard of M-G-M's search for a youngster who looked enough like Nelson Eddy to play him as a child in "Girl of the Golden West." She wrote a letter to the studio enclosing pictures of her eleven-year-old son.

Director Bob Leonard was so impressed by the resemblance that he put in a long distance call to Salem, talked to the boy on the telephone, liked his voice, and the upshot of it is that Mrs. Mankertz and her son, whose name the studio forgot to ask, are due here today.

Chatter in Hollywood: Paulette Goddard may have been burned up at David Selznick for saying that she was not being considered for Scarlett O'Hara, but she isn't too burned up to have extensive tests made for the role. The inside story is that although Selznick was not completely sold on Paulette for the much discussed "Gone With The Wind" his director, George Cukor, is of the opinion that she has the qualities that would make a successful Scarlett.

Paulette journeyed to San Francisco last week to see Charlie Chaplin, who is in seclusion there writing a story for her and himself, and to get his permission to make the tests. Sidney Howard has finished the scenario so it won't be long now.

Just heard that Franchot Tone steps into Spencer Tracy's role in "Three Comrades," during which time Spence will take a much needed rest. Metro has been approaching the filming of this Erich Maria Remarque novel with great care because of the trouble Universal experienced with Remarque's "The Road Back," not only with Germany but with the pro-Nazi element in America. Robert Taylor, Robert Young and Margaret Sullavan are the other stars assembled, and shooting will start within a week.

A Line or Two: TYRONE POWER'S frantic hurry to finish "Marie Antoinette" in time to report back to 20th Century-Fox didn't do him a bit of good. When he checked in at the studio yesterday he learned that CHICK CHANDLER with whom he had his first scenes, had fallen and broken his toe . . . SLIM SUMMERVILLE loves his role of Hank Hatfield in "Kentucky Moonshine." He plays a descendant of the rootin', tootin,' feudin,' Hatfields, and SLIM says it's right down his alley.

DUNCAN RENALDO, who first achieved fame in "Trader Horn" and later had such serious immigration difficulties, plays a featured role in Monogram's "Rose of the Rancho" . . . WAYNE MORRIS wouldn't stay off the set of "Love, Honor and Behave" where PRISCILLA is working, so Director LLOYD BACON put him to work as an extra. That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

"HOLLYWOOD HOTEL," with Louella Parsons, Benny Goodman and his swing orchestra, Dick Powell and Frances Langford, will open at the Paramount and Fenway tomorrow.

Highlights on New Screen Offerings

Benny Goodman leads his swing band as Frances Langford sings a number in "Hollywood Hotel," screen version of the famous Louella O. Parsons hour on the radio. This film opens tomorrow at the Paramount and Fenway.

Fredric March and Franciska Gaal in a tense scene from "The Buccaneer," Cecil B. DeMille's thrilling film which comes to the Metropolitan screen tomorrow. It was previewed during DeMille's recent visit to Boston.

Hollywood's Top Musical on Two Bills

"Hollywood Hotel," Warner Brothers' lavish film musical inspired by Mistress of Ceremonies Louella O. Parsons' famous radio program of the same name and featuring this celebrated Hearst columnist, moves to the Paramount and Fenway screens tomorrow.

Benny Goodman and his swing band, who required Manhattan's riot-squad to bring order out of chaos at Broadway's Paramount Theater last week, are importantly cast in "Hollywood Hotel."

Others featured are Dick Powell, Rosemary Lane, Hugh Herbert, Lola Lane and the entire cast of the nationwide air show.

The companion feature will be "The Invisible Menace," Boris Karloff's latest screen thriller featuring Marie Wilson, Eddie Craven and Regis Toomey.

A highlight of "Hollywood Hotel" is the sensational battle of music provided by Goodman's sizzling swing and Raymond Paige's symphonic arrangements.

Other reasons why "Hollywood Hotel" is your picture are the sweet singing of Dick Powell, Rosemary Lane, Jerry Cooper and Frances Langford, the comedy antics of Hugh Herbert, Alan Mowbray and Glenda Farrell, the eye-filling production numbers of Busby Berkeley, the "behind-the-scenes" revelations of Hollywood's studios, and the picturization of an entire "Hollywood Hotel" radio show.

Against this background is unfolded the romantic adventure of a boy and girl who travel through Hollywood's tinsel and glamour to happiness and success.

'Monastery' Run Near End

Fine Arts Theater patrons will have their final opportunity to see "Monastery" and "The Ski Chase" next Tuesday night, for on Wednesday "The Life and Loves of Beethoven," featuring the noted French screen star, Harry Baur, is scheduled for its New England premiere.

"The Life and Loves of Beethoven" is the first feature film biography of the world's greatest composer. The entire musical score has been arranged from selections of his incomparable compositions, including the popular "Moonlight Sonata," "Appassionata," "Third" (Eroica), "Fifth," "Sixth" (Pastoral) and "Ninth" symphonies.

Tremont's Films

The Tremont screen will offer "The Toast of New York", with Edward Arnold and Frances Farmer, and "Escape Me Never," starring Elisabeth Bergner, tomorrow through Saturday. Starting Sunday and continuing through Wednesday, "Romeo and Juliet," will be the attraction.

Comedy Booked For Shubert

A last-minute booking brings Edward Caulfield's comedy "There's Always a Breeze," to the Shubert Theater, Monday, February 14, for a limited engagement.

William Lynn, who created the character of "Odwin," caspermilquetoast greeting-card poet of "Three Men On a Horse," and played it throughout the entire New York run of the play, will be a featured member of the cast.

"There's Always a Breeze," a Joseph M. Hyman-Irving Cooper production, is described as a made story of the fantastic things that happen to an obscure bank clerk who suddenly finds himself the most important and sought-after human being in New York.

Featured in the cast are Cissie Loftus, Blanche Sweet, Leona Powers and Curtis Cooksey. There is a supporting cast of 20. Harry Wagstaff Gribble staged "There's Always a Breeze." Settings are by Frederick B. Fox.

Sonja Film Sets New Record

That Sonja Henie is the current rage is being emphatically demonstrated at the Keith Memorial theater, where her latest picture, "Happy Landing," attracted more than 53,000 patrons over the week-end, smashing all previous box office records.

So great has been the attendance that additional thousands were turned away. Critics have acclaimed "Happy Landing" as Sonja's best picture, and in it she gives further demonstrations of her versatility and wizardry on skates.

Newsreel Theater Bill for Today

Newsreel Theater screen offers the four most popular newsreels today and continuing through Friday. Additional features are "World on Parade," a Smith and Dale comedy, and Ina Ray Hutton and her band musical variety short. The program starts daily at 12 noon and is continuous until midnight.

At the New Gayety

"Elephant Boy," film version of Rudyard Kipling's "Toomai of the Elephants," with an all-native cast, and "We Have Our Moments," with comedian Mischa Auer, will make up the double-feature bill on the New Gayety screen, starting tomorrow. Today is the final day for "The Man Who Cried Wolf," with Lewis Stone and Barbara Read, and "Roaring Timber," with Jack Holt.

Chapter 27

VINCE BARTON had just returned from Miami. He'd come back on a plane because he was in a hurry. He'd [illegible] at Tropical, and he needed five grand to bet on a [illegible] killing that was coming off the next day.

He had it straight from the jockey's wife, who was young and [illegible] about [illegible] Vince sang "Bei Mir Bist du Schoen," she said.

Vince was sure he could get the money from Del. He had to get it.

He stopped [illegible] on Bronson street to buy a racing paper. There was a fellow in dark glasses watching him—a tanned fellow with a natty black mustache. Because of his disguise Vince didn't recognize him. But he recognized Vince.

The man was [illegible] Koopman, and he'd been waiting around for a half hour looking for a victim. Someone to kill. No one in particular. Anybody who'd make a convincing corpse—as required by Big Gus Mornick's plans.

As soon as he saw Vince, he knew he wouldn't look any further. Vince was [illegible] the man.

He followed [illegible] the street, and into a tavern. He waited while Vince [illegible] a phone call. There was no hurry. This was a job that required finesse.

"That you, Patsy?" said Vince. "Oh, I see. [illegible] want to talk to Ma Kelly. [illegible] I'll call later."

* * *

JUST about that time Patsy was in a many-mirrored dressing room on the second floor of the Prentiss mansion at Beverly.

"This is what I should call cozy," said the girl called Dodie. She was a slender, dark girl with a pert little face. "Just the four of us, and the house to ourselves."

"What'll we do?"

"I don't know. Dance. Have a few cocktails. Neck a little. . . . Can Whit carry his liquor?"

"Not very well," Patsy had to admit.

"Oh, well, I guess you can handle him all right. M-m-m! Is this going to be fun. She's a [illegible] "You a good driver?"

"Not very."

"Too bad. I'll have to watch my drinks then."

"Why?" asked Patsy.

"Don't you know? The boys are sure to get plastered, and one of us will have to drive home if we want to get home. It's always that way."

Patsy was learning things.

"Do you have to be home early?"

"You bet," said Dodie. "Two [illegible] then [illegible] take my hair off. I'm tired of being a sub-deb. Wait till I come out next year. I'll show 'em."

Patsy knew she'd have to be [illegible] before 2 o'clock. But she decided not to mention it just then.

Whit was waiting at the bottom of the stairs. The drinks were in long glasses with frosted sugar clinging to the edges. Whit called them brandy frappes.

"Well," said Dodie, "I suppose you have some kind of music here. Or do you just expect us to sit around?"

"Far from it," said Whit. "You're going to work for your drinks." He started up a phonograph—the kind that changes its own. "What'll it be? Hotcha? Or something blue?"

"Hotcha!" voted Patsy.

After they'd danced a while, Whit did some more mixing. He seemed to be handling himself better than usual. Possibly feeling responsibility as host.

"Having a good time?" he asked Patsy as they lounged side by side in a cushioned corner near the big fireplace.

"Swell."

"You always have a good time, don't you?"

"You bet," said Patsy. "And I'm always going to."

"That's sense, lovely. It's what you're made for."

Smiling, Whit put an arm around her, carelessly drew her near, kissed her.

Patsy smiled back, enjoying it. She took to affection like a kitten. And she liked Whit. He didn't get violent and mussy.

"You're a pretty swell girl, Patsy."

"Uh huh."

"You've eyes like a big doll. And you're [illegible] as the devil. You're a lot of things. All of them swell."

* * *

DODIE and Spike returned from a stroll through the house. Her dark little face was flushed. She seemed to have forgotten all about keeping tab on her drinks.

"I was just thinking," she said. "This is a nice party, but it needs food."

"You've been nosing around," accused Whit. "Leave it to a boarding school girl to find edibles. Still, I suppose we might as well go ahead."

Rising, he led the way, by devious turnings, to the glass enclosure. Patsy had noticed as they drove in through the high gates.

And it was even more wonderful as she saw it now—from the inside.

Growing flowers everywhere. Sending out a mass of color and perfume. Sunshine pouring through the sloping transparent roof. White and blue tiles sloping down to a pool of crystal clear water in the center of the enclosure—a pool with steps and a diving board.

Beside the pool, a round table set for four—a smaller serving table nearby. Over the serving table bent an expressionless middle-aged man servant, removing the foil from a champagne bottle.

Patsy could see the high fence bordering the estate. It occurred to her that people were passing it now—that hundreds must pass it every day—without suspecting the luxury that lay inside.

Well, she'd know anyway—after this. And they could go right on passing as far as she was concerned. She liked the inside.

The expressionless servant moved silently about, removing dishes, filling glasses with champagne.

Patsy bent, felt the pool with her fingers.

"Why," she said, "it's warm!"

"About 85," said Whit. "Which reminds me. You said something about swimming. Would you like to?"

"Would I! . . . But I haven't any swim-suit."

"Oh, I guess we can fix that up."

With the champagne, Patsy's high spirits soared higher.

When they returned to the big room to dance, she felt wings literally lifting her from the floor. It was like being a kid again, only nicer.

She was so absorbed she didn't even notice Whit was beginning to feel his drinks. Nor that Dodie and Spike were scarcely coming in the room except to replenish their glasses.

"Spike's going to make me a movie queen," Dodie declared solemnly as they returned from one of these excursions. "He says I'll make the public forget Dietrich quick."

"Absolutely!" asserted Spike enthusiastically. "Dodie's legs are much nicer."

Whit took that up.

"Don't let him kid you, Dodie. That's the same line he fed Patsy. He said hers were nicer."

"Well," said Spike, "they are."

"Nicer than Dietrich's or Dodie's?"

"Just nicer," said Spike, diplomatically.

"Well," said Dodie, evidently feeling she was getting none the best of it, "mine are all right. If you could just see me in a swim-suit"—

"I know a way to settle that," said Whit. "If you'll excuse me?"—and he dashed upstairs.

Returning, he cast a batch of brightly colored, wholly unworn, swim suits on the floor.

"Some of those are bound to fit," he said.

But Dodie's enthusiasm had abruptly dwindled.

"I'm sorry you went to so much trouble," she said. "I don't feel like swimming today."

"Oh, you don't?" said Whit. "Why didn't you say so before? How about you, Patsy?"

Patsy glanced appealingly at Dodie.

"It would be lots of fun," she said.

"I don't think so," replied that changeable sub-deb.

"Well, I'm going to anyhow!" declared Patsy, and began digging through the pile of suits.

It would be lots of fun, she thought, as she ran upstairs to change. It would freshen her—take away that queer, dizzy feeling. She hadn't expected champagne to be so potent.

* * *

WHIT bowed as she appeared from the dressing room.

"You win," he said, "against all comers. No wonder Dodie was afraid to compete."

They dived in side by side. The water was bracing and soft to the skin.

As they came up, Patsy smiled into Whit's eyes, only inches away from her own.

"I wish," she said, with passionate earnestness, "I never had to go away from here."

"You never ought to," [illegible] Whit. "You belong here."

He essayed to kiss her again, but she evaded him easily, laughing as she ducked him under.

"You're taking the best way in the world to lose an edge," Spike warned them from a point well beyond splashing distance.

"That's all right," said Whit. "I can always get another. You could make yourself useful, though, by mixing me one."

He swam to the edge, sipped the drink Spike handed him.

Then Spike and Dodie went back into the living room.

"You're certainly a pleasure to the eye, Patsy," said Whit. "How about doing another dive? So I can get the full effect."

Patsy obliged. Whit climbed out, rocked the board in a jack-knife, clove the water beside her.

"A honey!" The words were on her lips, ready to be spoken as soon as he came to the surface.

She waited. No sign of him . . . He was probably getting ready to come under her . . . some kid stuff . . .

She climbed up on the ladder . . . looking down into the water . . . Then she saw him. But he wasn't swimming. He was lying motionless on the bottom.

Patsy didn't waste time calling for help.

Her graceful body split the surface in a clean straight dive which carried her to the bottom.

She wrapped her fingers in Whit's hair, kicked desperately and struck out for the surface.

Fortunately, the pool was narrow, and she had only a little way to tow him. Five feet at most. But Whit was dead weight, and it took all her courage to pull his form that last foot, while she grasped frantically for the ladder.

After that all she could do was cling to the ladder herself—to hold his head above the water—and to scream.

It seemed years before Spike heard her and came running in, lifting Whit to the white and blue tiled border of the pool.

Patsy was out of the water [illegible] a split second later.

What [illegible] and [illegible]

"Turn him over. [illegible]," she ordered! She'd [illegible] watched the lifesavers at Carson Beach. "Now lift him up by the shoulders . . . now down . . ."

Grabbing towels and bathrobes, she rubbed furiously at Whit's pale skin, trying to warm him, to set the blood flowing again.

She [illegible] for his heart-beat. She thought she could hear a faint flutter, but she wasn't sure.

Then Dodie, in a hysteria of youth and alcoholic excitement—"Oh, oh. This is terrible. He'll die . . . I'll be ruined . . . They'll put me out of school."

"Shut up, you idiot!" said Patsy tensely.

She continued her labors . . . Presently, Whit [illegible] . . . looked up at her.

"My heart," he whispered. "That last drink."

"Sh," said Patsy. "You're all right now."

Whit smiled up at her.

"Lovely," he said. "Lovely!"

As Patsy meets her first deep emotional crisis, Big Gus weaves the net in which he hopes to snare Jerry O'Donovan and Mickey. Meanwhile, Brad Talton is still missing. But you'll find news of him in tomorrow's chapter—as well as the outcome of Patsy's exciting adventure on the North Shore.

While some old Boston and Beacon Hill names are used in this story for purely fictitious characters, they refer to no actual persons.

Patsy, Awed by Prentiss Luxury, Finds Whit More Suitor Than Host

Whit put an arm around Patsy as they lounged in a cushioned corner near the fireplace. He carelessly drew her near, kissed her. Patsy smiled back, enjoying it. She took to affection like a kitten. And she liked Whit. He didn't get violent and mussy. "You always have a good time, don't you?" "You bet," said Patsy, "and I'm always going to!"

Patsy's Presence of Mind Saves the Life of Prentiss Scion in Beverly Mansion's Pool

What Has Gone Before

Lovely Sheila Kelly and her family are typical of the best in Boston. So is Atty. Jerry O'Donovan of Roxbury, young B. C. graduate and political leader who loves her. As is Bradford Cabot Talton of Harvard, boxing team letter man, Social Registerite, who also loves her.

All's peaceful in the Kelly family until Sheila, attempting to save her 16-year-old sister Patsy from the consequences of a pickup date, meets Talton, and fascinates him.

Jerry, intent on coming elections, misunderstands, quarrels with Sheila. Mistrusting her own ability to resist Brad's ardent love-making, Sheila decides to break off with both men.

Brad's arrest for drunken driving while she is a passenger in his car, however, makes it necessary for her to see him again. And when Jerry gallantly offers to defend him she finds her love for the young lawyer reviving.

Patsy is frankly interested in Brad's roommate, Whit Prentiss, and Jane Prentiss, the latter's debutante cousin, is intrigued by Mickey, Sheila's brother, even though Mickey, interested only in becoming a welterweight champion, gives her little encouragement. Mickey's ring ambitions are opposed by his father, former Police Sergeant Bernard F. Kelly.

A sinister element enters the affairs of the Kelly family when Big Gus Mornick, king of the Boston rackets, tries to obtain possession of a secret police report on racketeering Sheila has typed in the course of her work at the State House, where she is temporarily employed as a stenographer.

Sheila escapes a perilous encounter with the racket king in his South End stronghold. Sentimental at heart, Gus decides she's a "nice, sweet frail," and leaves her out of his further plans.

Sheila, searching through old tax records, finds that Vince Barton, a brother-in-law who is temporarily estranged from Delphine, Sheila's older sister, may be heir to valuable Boston real estate.

Brad, through the efforts of Sheila and Jerry, escapes with a fine from his auto law violation predicament. But when Sheila calls his rooms to return a valuable bracelet he has sent her as a farewell present, Whit tells her Brad has vanished.

Meanwhile, Boston's underworld has been terrorized by another rackets murder, perpetrated by Greefy Koopman, right hand torpedo of Big Gus.

Vince Barton returns to Boston just in time to witness the killing. Greefy, freed by the police for lack of evidence, recognizes Barton on the street, knows he is identified, and flees.

En route to Montreal, Brad is robbed by Greefy who has escaped on the same train. Stranded, Brad casts his lot with a barnstorming aviator.

Jerry discovers Barton's inheritance is worth $200,000. After broadcasting an attack on Big Gus, he goes with Sheila and Patsy to El Morocco, where Vince is making his Boston crooning debut. They inspect the inherited property at Kenmore square, and draw up an agreement in the Kenmore Hotel, securing half of the legacy for Del.

Jerry is elected City Councillor. Mornick, to silence his attack, plans to frame Mickey and thus reach O'Donovan through Sheila. He instructs Greefy Koopman to pin a murder charge on the youth, first obtaining a fresh body.

Patsy, meanwhile, visits Whit's Beverly estate with Whit and another young couple.

Grocers Oppose Sales Tax Plan

Members of the Massachusetts Retail Grocers and Provision Dealers Association, including some 3000 business men, today were solidly aligned against the proposed 2 per cent sales tax.

Edward M. Synan, president, announced that the board of directors had voted against it.

"It was the unanimous opinion," he said, "that the small tax yield, after deducting the cost of collection, does not justify such an imposition of hardship on low income workers and their families.

"This association will gladly join with other groups working for the defeat of the sales tax."

Timilty in Move To Reduce Taxis

Police Commissioner Timilty today planned action to get taxi company officials to reduce their number of cabs by one-third to relieve traffic congestion.

He said most of the companies have agreed to a reduction but the I. T. O. A. refused to join the move. Elevated officials have complained that too many cabs are partly responsible for the large El deficit.

Damon Runyon

We have received a letter from a [illegible] newspaperman who says he is [illegible] because he seems unable to develop a [illegible] writing style. He says he flounders among words.

Maybe he knows too many words. That we think is a heavy handicap to many young newspaper writers—and old ones too. Irvin Shrewsbury Cobb as a rewrite man for Charles Chapin on the old New York Evening World was one of the greatest newspaper writers that ever lived and one of the fastest. He could write all day on twenty words.

We do not think a newspaper writer should ever use a word that sends a customer to the dictionary. Sometimes we are guilty of violating that rule ourself but the idea is, don't do as we do—do as we say. When we use a long or unusual word, it probably is one we have just discovered, and it is even money we cannot pronounce it and 2 to 1 we would be unable to spell it if we did not look it up.

BIG WORDS ENVIED

We get jealous of those newspaper writers with the big words and want to make our customers think we are pretty smart, too. Often we are rescued by an astute copy reader, who gazes briefly at the long unusual word, and says to himself "hum, is that so?" and rubs it out and substitutes a nice little word that means the same thing, and thus saves us from false pretenses.

The copy reader is a sort of policeman of the newspaper's vocabulary. When you find a long or unusual word in this column, kindly dismiss it as a misdemeanor on our part, though we think you are entitled to censure the copy reader for nodding at his post when the word went past.

The late Arthur Brisbane was a master hand at using small, easily understandable words. That was one of the secrets of his great popularity with the customers. They did not have to go to a college professor to find out what he meant though Mr. Brisbane probably knew every word in the book. For simplicity of wording, we recommend Mr. Brisbane's works to all young newspapermen.

Our youthful correspondent says he has been in the newspaper business a little over a year. He is worrying about a writing style ten years too soon. Newspaper writing style is largely a matter of development and experience under city editors and copy readers—the last we think, more than the former.

If a young newspaperman will carefully study his own product after a good copy reader gets through with it, he will learn plenty about newspaper style.

The city editor tells the young newspaperman what to write. The copy reader shows him how to write. We have often heard young newspapermen beef about the copy readers "mutilating" their stories but it has been our observation [illegible]

The copy reader is one fellow we have [illegible] newspaper [illegible] for the better.

Few writers, newspaper or otherwise, are born writing so to speak, unless we except poets. Writing is something you learn, like laying bricks. It is true a youth may have a certain flair for writing from his earliest years but generally it takes time and much practice to develop it. When they write from taw they are geniuses and geniuses are infrequent.

The average young writer usually begins by imitating some writer whom he admires. We regret [illegible] that [illegible] their writing [illegible]. However most of them develop their own individual style as they gain confidence and experience.

BIBLE AS INFLUENCE

Every writer's style probably stems to some other writer though the stemming may grow fainter as the writer expands. O. Henry's [illegible] style can be traced to a French writer Henri Murger but in the end O. Henry's style was more distinct and individual than that of Murger. The greatest natural writer that ever lived, Rudyard Kipling, was undoubtedly deeply influenced in his style by the Bible, and we think that is also true of the modern writer, Pearl Buck.

We are often asked by young men how they can learn to write. We confess we do not know. We have heard it said by gentlemen more learned in this matter than we are that the only way to learn to write is to write.

We have given this answer to youthful questioners and then the next thing they ask, naturally enough, is what are they to do with what they write. That sticks us again.

The newspaper and magazine editors tell us they are always looking for new young writers and we pass that word on to our youthful questioners. Our reports from them to date would scarcely justify us in opening a literary agency in opposition to Mr. George Bye.

ALBANY, N. Y., Feb. 2 (INS)—A claim of $883,982.73 in back personal income taxes against the estate of the late Colonel Edward H. R. Green has been filed by the state of New York, it was announced today by Mark Graves, president of the State Tax Commission.

Goodwin Assails Merit System

Registrar of Motor Vehicles Frank A. Goodwin today assailed a merit system [illegible]

Under the "incentive" plan, all motorists would be given a 15 per cent rebate on their annual compulsory insurance premiums if they went without an accident during the year.

Goodwin appeared before a legislative committee as a result of a proposal by Senator Arthur W. Hollis of Newton favoring rewards for good drivers.

"It's one of those things that sounds good but won't work," Registrar Goodwin declared.

"A great part of money paid out by insurance companies under the compulsory law in this state are nuisance claims—cheaper to settle than to fight.

"Is a driver against whom such a claim was paid to be penalized?"

Goodwin revealed there were about [illegible] cars had no accidents every year while about [illegible] were in accidents.

H. B. Church of the Motor Truck Club of Massachusetts and Theodore E. Fogg of the [illegible] Truck Owners Association appeared in favor of the proposal.

GIRL About TOWN

By MARGUERITE DOWNEY

We went in for revolutions back in 1776. But not so now Today we'll have no truck with the current battle of the decade—swing versus waltz.

Marguerite Downey

We're unlike New Yorkers who rioted when Benny Goodman, king of today's swing made his premiere at the Paramount Theater. We're much too conservative for that.

Of course Nye Mayhew at the Statler will give you what he calls "polite swing." Michael Zarin of the Copley-Plaza labels his music "continental swing" while all that Jack Marshard will offer you in the line of swing is a restrained interpretation of "Banks of Loch Lomond." That's about as swingy as the town will ever get.

But Viennese waltzing is the thing in the beantown world of terpsichore. It's traced to two causes. One is the return of pilgrims from Salzburg festivals. The other is the regular waltzing parties which Mr. and Mrs. E. Sohier Welch hold regularly in their Louisburg sq. home.

THIS Is LIFE

By ROBERT E. ROGERS

The pause in the school year's occupation which is known as midyears is perhaps the pleasantest of "breaks" we have. The one-day holidays do not count. Perhaps we have too many of them Columbus Day, Armistice Day and Thanksgiving Day are only tantalizing and disrupt the schedule besides. Christmas is ten days. Part of it is spent in hectic fashion getting ready for the Day and the week in getting over it and then getting over New Years.

Robert E. Rogers

But midyears are different. We have one week for the actual examinations and the subsequent mopping up and one week for leisure unalloyed before the new term begins. That does not hold true for department heads and big shots, who are, apparently, always on the job. But the rest of us scatter to the country and the seashore to winter sports and what have you—for a week which is really much pleasanter than the Christmas break.

Different colleges, different habits. At Harvard they give the boys two weeks, plus a preliminary three weeks for "reading period" to settle down their examinations. [illegible]

"Now you all have me thinking . . . Yep, and I feel plenty sorry for all you youngsters . . . for all but the lucky one who wins me.

CHAPTER 8

Jared Whitney grinned and kicked his horse along. Lance, beaming gratitude, rode beside him.

In the distance the house of Serena [illegible] itself. Jared smiled. That house, half hidden by green [illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible] "Come in!" Lance put his hand on his guest's shoulder as they went up the steps. The big, comfortable [illegible] with saddles, whips, [illegible]

A long-legged, sunbrowned girl came down the hall eating an apple. She said "Lance! You're going to catch—oh!"

"My sister, Serena," Lance said. "Mr. Whitney."

Jared [illegible] said "For heaven's sake, child wipe your mouth! It's all over apple!"

HOW COULD YOU?

Red [illegible] under the creamy tan. She scrubbed at her mouth. "You wait!" she flung at him. "You're going to catch it, Mr. Lanceford Ferris!" Her chin quivered suddenly. "Oh, Lance, how could you? Caar!"

"It was an accident! Good Lord anybody can have an accident! Listen, Serena"—he dropped his voice—"how about telling the Old Gentleman we're here? Tell him I've got a guest—you know, kind of honey him a little. Go on—there's a sweet girl!"

She [illegible] at Jared [illegible] Then [illegible] Lance's [illegible] she [illegible]ed "I—I don't know. He was awfully hurt, Lance. I'll try." She fled down the hall.

Lance grinned nervously. "She can generally handle him."

"I sure hope so!" Jared [illegible] have given something [illegible] to be back in Tenspot.

THE SHOWDOWN

Serena came back. "He wants you." She gave Lance an apprehensive look. "Oh, Lance, be nice!"

"Thanks, kid!" Lance squared his shoulders. "Well, here goes!"

[illegible]

"I hope your father won't be hard on him, Miss Ferris. He's just a youngster."

"He's old enough to know how to take a jump. Oh, I didn't mean that. I do hope father—but Lance is so trifling sometimes."

Her brown fingers twisted. "Let's—let's go in the dining room." She cast an unhappy look toward her father's study, and shied off like a nervous colt . . . "Have—have an apple, Mr. Whitney." She [illegible] a heaped dish.

"Thanks!" He was taking in the [illegible] the shining sideboard [illegible] portraits. Mechanically he snapped the apple with his forefinger.

JUST A HABIT

Serena's eyes were [illegible] "Why d'you do that?"

"Oh—sorry! Just a habit, I guess. At home—Vermont: that's an apple country—we kind of test 'em that way. Apple-knocking. But I guess it's not a very nice thing to do to an apple somebody offers you?"

She brushed aside the apology. "But how can you tell?"

"Why—if it sounds 'plunk'," he snapped it again—"like that—it's liable to be mellow. If it's 'pink' it's not set yet."

"I never knew that," she breathed.

"Well, kids—very young ladies, don't generally bother, I guess. Eat 'em just as they come."

Her chin lifted. "I'm not as young as you seem to think, Mr. Whitney. I'm 17. Well, rising 17."

"Go on." He bit into his apple, a fine ringing bite. "That's a good apple. Didn't grow that here, though."

"Of course not. We don't get the snow here—snow puts nitrogen in the soil. Although they say it's really potash that makes flavor."

THE WRONG REMARK

His eyes widened. "Why, you ought to be a boy, Miss Ferris! Make a farmer when you grow up!"

She didn't stamp, but she gave that impression. "I don't know what you'd call being a farmer or being grown up. I've got a fifty-acre orchard. Peaches and plums."

Jared bit into his apple again. Why, there weren't two dozen fifty-acre orchards in the State of Vermont!

Jared had tried to stifle a sudden grin. "You wouldn't like it if I told you," he teased. "When I was pushing steel, back in Arizona, they used to say that California had the smallest stoves and the biggest liars in the United States."

Serena looked at him, moved to the door. "I think," she said, "Lance will be out in a few minutes."

"Miss Ferris!" He was suddenly red to the roots of his hair. "Please! I never did have sense enough to keep my mouth shut. I—oh, Lord, I didn't mean—please, Miss Ferris—I wouldn't for the world—"

"I do have a 50-acre orchard! And it's my orchard, not my father's, and I do tend it myself."

She faced him. And suddenly there was something about it that was heavenly. This tall, lean stranger with the straight, hard eyes and the big, hard hands, stammering and confused — before her! "Of course," she said loftily, "you don't have to believe it."

A MUTUAL INTEREST

Behind his confusion, the engineer in him was already figuring. "I don't know much about peaches and plums, Miss Ferris—honestly! But—won't that give you something like a five-thousand-bushel crop?"

"Ten, Mr. Whitney, when the trees are really set. Of course they won't come in till year after next."

"But—look here, you got a market for that much fruit?"

[illegible] now? It might surprise you."

[illegible] "Listen, Miss Ferris, I'd like to know how a young lady of seventeen—"

She laughed. "I suppose you think I'm a [illegible]."

"Why—no." His [illegible] were thoughtful. "Makes sense, this ought to be good fruit country. You've got a water-haul."

Serena caught her breath. In the two years she had struggled with her trees, nobody at home [illegible] had ever taken her seriously [illegible] before. But she shook her head. "Too slow. The railroad goes right next my orchard, though."

"Water-haul'll keep your freight rates down, just the same. Let's see—" He [illegible] a pencil and an envelope. "If you can make out to ship car-lots—" Eagerly, the ashen head, the sandy one bent over the quick figures . . . "There. Now, figuring a car at five hundred bushels—"

THE STORM PASSES

A step sounded in the hall. Serena's eyes went wide. She [illegible]

The Colonel and Lance came [illegible] Colonel's hand was on Lance's shoulder. It was [illegible]

[illegible] she remembered Jared, an engineer from Tenspot. A Yankee! And her father had to like him—he HAD to! Then they were shaking hands. Prayerfully she watched her father's eyes [illegible]

The Colonel's [illegible] the corners.

Quick, warm happiness! Oh, whatever Lance had done—even [illegible]

Lance stuck his legs straight out from the Victorian chair [illegible]

"Well—it would do us good, I guess." He tried to make it enthusiastic.

Lance was grinning. "I agree with you—you elegant liar! But right now, I'm walking delicately." He broke off as Serena appeared in the doorway. "D'you have to wear those things Sundays, too?"

A DIVIDED SKIRT

Serena wore a [illegible]

It was [illegible] skirt west of the M[illegible], probably the first anywhere [illegible] call it a divided skirt [illegible] it was undeniably [illegible].

She couldn't. Serena [illegible] the [illegible] saddle habit. And if she rode in her dress, as she had as a little girl, her legs showed and the men laughed.

Serena hadn't really thought about the skirt for a long time. But now—with this tall stranger— She tried to brazen it out. "My habit's too small."

"Say, when are you going to quit growing out of your clothes? Now listen, sprat, you're not going to tag us!"

Her elbows quivered. "Tag you! I wouldn't be seen riding with you, Lanceford Ferris! I wouldn't—"

Mrs. Beeckman on Manners

BIRTHDAYS

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

1. If two girls have a birthday party together, such as Mary Jones and Ruth Brown, should one buy a gift for each?

2. What is the most appropriate but inexpensive gift for girls from ten to twelve years of age?

3. Should one wish them "Happy Birthday" upon entering, or when alone, or when all are present?

W.

1. If we take a present to one, we should take a present to the other, even if we know one girl better than we do the other.

2. Girls of this age cherish a new purse or a small gay party bag, a pen and pencil set, or either a pen or pencil especially one stamped with their initials or name, or sheer white linen handkerchiefs embroidered in their favorite colors with their first name, or a small writing portfolio or a school portfolio, a picture framed in one of the new natural-colored woods now so charming and inexpensive.

3. Wish them an especially enthusiastic "Happy Birthday" when you greet them as you enter the room . . . and there will be many occasions, too, during the evening when you will repeat this friendly greeting, especially when the birthday cake is cut.

OLIVES

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

Will you kindly inform me if it is proper to take olives with the fingers, or if the fork should be used? There wasn't any olive fork in the dish, but there was a fork at my place which I used for my cake.

A says that I should have taken the olive with my own fork. I took it from the dish with my thumb and index finger and ate it in the same way. Did I do right, or was A right?

"OLIVER"

With the serving dish of olives, the hostess should always have some kind of silver or silver serving piece . . . the small olive serving-spoon, or the pierced serving fork, or a teaspoon.

If there isn't a serving piece on the dish, then we may, with propriety, take the olive in our fingers, as the dish is passed.

And you ate your olive correctly, holding it between your thumb and index finger, nibbling the olive and then putting the pit on your plate, without having put the pit into your mouth.

MARRIED COMRADES

By ADELE GARRISON

ALLEN DRAKE IS POSEUR

CHAPTER 520

AT Harry Underwood's reluctant answer to Lillian's query concerning the disposition of the marauder upstairs, who had tried to murder him, she gave a startled and terrified ejaculation.

"But why, Harry?" she said stridently, with a rebellion and a crassness utterly foreign to her. "Why should the matter rest with Mr. Spencer when you are the one directly concerned? That man was plotting to murder you, not Mr. Spencer. You certainly have the right—"

"My dear Mrs. Underwood!" My uncle's suave tones, with a hint of frigidity in them, broke into the colloquy. "You know that it is an axiom among his helpers that the judgment of the chief must never be questioned. And as he expressly commissioned me to stand in his place, not only impersonating him but assuming every bit of his authority, I naturally cannot delegate any jot or tittle of it to anyone."

SCRUTINIZE UNCLE

I saw Harry Underwood and Dicky glance sharply at my uncle as he made his speech, which we all knew my father never would have couched in those words.

True, my father would never have delegated authority that affected his general work to anyone else, but I was sure that if he had been in the room, instead of this queer twin brother, whom he had commissioned to impersonate him, he would have given the disposition of Harry Underwood's would-be assassin to Mr. Underwood himself without any fuss.

"Even if he, for some reason, had deemed it necessary to decide the marauder's fate himself, he would never have delivered a lecture about it," in Dicky's phrasing.

It was another count, and a particularly forceful one in the indictment against this strange newly-found relative of mine, which Lillian and I had formed.

I discovered something in that scrutiny which I wondered if the others saw.

His pompous, serious air was a cloak. Underneath, he was so amused that he was having hard work to conceal his risibles. And that discovery riveted my conviction that he was other than he seemed.

It had seemed an hour since he had finished speaking, but in reality it was but the fraction of a second before Harry Underwood said gravely:

"The chief's will is law, of course, and as you represent him, we give the same allegiance to you."

"We are—I am gratified," he said pompously, and it was evident that he had started his reply with the editorial or royal "we."

This time Harry Underwood's scrutiny was more prolonged. He took advantage of the fact that my uncle had turned away from him and was looking directly at me to study his face and figure minutely.

"What interests me more than anything else," he said, "is what was contained in that note which you brought to the door of your husband's room a while back."

"It was a strictly private matter between my husband and me," Lillian said icily.

"But nothing can be private in times—" my uncle began, when Harry Underwood, with a hearty chuckle, dashed across the room and struck my uncle a blow between the shoulders which would have floored a man of my father's age.

"Come out of the bushes, Pocahontas," he boomed. "You is diskivered," he paused dramatically—"Allen Drake!"

What Men Believe About Women

By ELSIE ROBINSON

SILLY as are the things which women believe about men, they [illegible] the things which men believe about women.

[illegible]

No man understands women [illegible] says [illegible]. Whereat women are greatly flattered. They needn't be. It's no compliment.

The real reason why men do not understand women is not because women are beyond understanding . . . but because men do not think they are worth understanding.

Any man could understand any woman if he judged her by the tests and standards which he would apply to any man of like calibre. For, fundamentally, there isn't a particle of difference between male intelligence and female intelligence.

There has been tremendous difference between male and female training and environment, but, given an even break, the average woman can qualify with the average man.

But it is abhorrent to male egotism to admit this. He will not acknowledge that the lady shares his brand of humanity. He insists that she's different. And he has devised a most clever sales talk to put the idea over.

"Women are smart," say men, "but they aren't smart the way men are smart. They don't really think things out—for the truth is they haven't regular brains to think with. But they have a queer, mysterious function in its place—THEY HAVE INTUITION."

"Intuition doesn't really amount to much—but now and then it pulls some awful fast stuff," continues the complacent male, "and that's where a fellow gets fooled. He thinks a woman MUST be using her brains. But how can a woman use her brains when she hasn't got any to use? Nope, you can't expect a woman to be intelligent like a man. But she sure is mysterious."

All of which you might imagine would make the Dear Little Woman see red. BUT NOT SO. Only one sentence in this sales argument registers with her. Namely, that she is "mysterious."

And this tickles her so much that she's willing to let the Big Boy get by with murder if he'll just keep up the Feminine Mystery fantasy.

For, of course, it is only a fantasy. WOMEN AREN'T A PARTICLE MORE MYSTERIOUS THAN MEN. Their boasted "intuition" and "feminine instinct" are reasoning processes [illegible] as man's balanced judgment is reasoning process.

Woman, unhampered by thousands of years of conventional training, leaps at conclusions, whereas man lumbers along in approved ruts. But she blunders quite as often in her leaps as he does in his lumbering.

Feminine mystery—only a fantasy, but what a comfortable fantasy for both sexes. It allows the male to park the female in the back alley and go his way unhindered, with her own enthusiastic approval. And it allows the female to acquire a lot of fancy merit without working for it. Whether you're that kind of a man or that kind of a woman, it's certainly a [illegible] arrangement.

This same [illegible] feminine attributes.

Traditionally, women are purer, more [illegible], more sensitive, more timid and generally nicer than men. NOT A WORD OF IT IS TRUE!

Women are imbued with exactly the same moral and emotional qualities and face exactly the same temptations as men. But how complimentary to the ladies if the gentlemen deny this . . . AND HOW CONVENIENT FOR THE GENTLEMEN!

Child Unions Lead To Lifelong Misery

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Since we seem to have gone "Mother India" one better on the question of child marriages—arrangement by parents not entering into infant wedlock in the United States but managed entirely by the kiddies themselves—let's devote a few moments to American child brides and grooms.

The latest of these to make the headlines—a girl of 13 and a boy of 14—were discovered in Florida, where they had eloped in the girl's parents' car. And the child bride in Tennessee, aged 8, whose husband gave her a doll for a wedding present, seems at last accounts to be having in-law trouble.

"Evil, be thou my good," as Nietzsche said, for these infant marriages in Tennessee have resulted in putting some laws on the statute books, making such matings illegal.

Meanwhile please let me say that in the many years I've been writing this column, the bulk of letters I've had from unhappy husbands and wives attribute their miseries to being married when they "should have been in school."

THEY LACK TRAINING

Girls not yet 20 years of age tell me they are the mothers of three and four children.

Then they go on to write how enviously unhappy they are when they see girls of their own age going to dances and having good times, while they have to stay at home and take care of cross, teething babies and wash the lipstick off their husbands' shirt collars, left there by other women.

The tragedy of such marriages is that these girls left school before they acquired enough education to earn a penny.

They quit school in the fifth or sixth grades, and they are unable to take Vocational Training, which the Bureau of Education offers gratuitously, because they have no foundation on which to build. "Besides, I'm too tired to study anyhow, after all I've had to do during the day."

MEN ALSO SUFFER

Tragedy is not always confined to the wives of the underprivileged. Successful men find stodgy little women tied around their necks like millstones.

They fell in love with this or that [illegible] when she was 18 and had what the French call beauty of the Devil.

The husband has forged ahead, been successful in his profession, and the wife's culture hasn't progressed much farther than differentiating between types of perfume and applying a daub for [illegible] of love.

Unless there are children to keep these mismated couples together, the mills of Reno, like those of the gods, start grinding.

When more mature people marry, there's a different story to tell. They seldom make failures of their marriages, like the girls and boys in their teens, but thirty seems ancient to these teen age youngsters.

WHO'S TO BLAME?

Grueling economy is the acid test of love, and when these pampered boys and girls are reduced to putting old newspapers in the soles of their shoes to keep out the wet they feel they are walking in their own Gethsemane.

Who's to blame?

No one, perhaps, but old Mother Nature, who, for her own purposes, endows these children, in the eyes of each other, with a beauty and witchery never really their own.

They marry while the witchery is turned on full blast.

And then Mother Nature, not always a kind mother, leaves them to their own devices.

Psychologists attribute a great deal of the child marriages in this country to unhappy home life. Children grow tired of hearing their parents scrap.

Again, the parents are too strict, and decline to let the youngsters have a little legitimate fun at home.

So the girls and boys attempt a New Deal in happiness by going off and getting married.

TRUE STORY OF HOLLYWOOD DIETS

By IDA JEAN KAIN

SCREEN stars pay a high price for streamlines, according to Louella O. Parsons, columnist and radio commentator on the Hollywood scene.

The stars appear so radiently beautiful on the screen that we are apt to get the impression that any program they favor for health and beauty must be all right.

I have always suspected this to be untrue since ultra streamlines are not compatible with perfect health. The interview with Miss Parsons proves these suspicion were well founded.

"Many of the stars have to diet because the figure looks ten pounds heavier on the screen," Miss Parsons explains. "This strenuous dieting lowers their resistance." And here is the inside story of what happens when a Hollywood actress decides to keep her weight down at any cost.

The prolonged saltless and meatless diet followed by the glamorous Garbo has resulted in anemia, and her friends are very much concerned over her health.

• • •

Luise Rainer, as you know, has been very sick. Miss Parsons believes this illness to be partly due to ill-advised dieting and says: "Miss Rainer told me one time that she ate only eggs and tomatoes. She had to get very fat when she played the role of Anna Held in the Great Ziegfeld, and when she made 'The Good Earth' she had to be many pounds lighter. So she went on a terribly strict diet and ate practically nothing. Since that time she has hardly had a well day."

Joan Crawford, who looks so willowy on the screen, normally has broad shoulders and a structure which entitles her to more weight. Because fashion demands that the screen favorites be as thin as rails, she has always dieted rigorously. She is a prey to bad colds and sore throats and lately has been forced to eat nourishing food.

Ruth Chatterton was an addict of the saltless vegetable diet and since that time she has not been really well.

• • •

Gloria Swanson, on the other hand, has kept her health and figure surprisingly well. She follows a well-balanced diet and likes vegetables cooked in parchment bags in which their natural juices are retained and their mineral value kept intact.

Some of the stars this writer points out have improved their health through a wise diet and exercise program. Clark Gable, who goes on a four-day diet of steak, chops and tomatoes, and exercises along with dieting, has never looked so well in his life. Many of the players keep fit with tennis and other outdoor sports.

Prior to her own recent film debut in Hollywood Hotel, Miss Parsons slimmed down. She tells me she took off 28 pounds by a sensible program of balanced diet and exercise. She ate very sparingly at dinner, taking her main meal in the middle of the day, and exercised morning and night on an electric bicycle. Mary Boland took off weight in the same manner.

The newest fad going the rounds of the stars is the one in which only uncooked vegetables are eaten. This diet is foolish and dangerous. Some of the stars never touch meat, eggs and milk—no wonder they lose their health.

Adverse Bidding Helps Here

North's jump two-heart bid is worthy of note. True, North had only a fair four-card heart suit, but North realized it was his duty to [illegible] and his purpose was quite logically, to inform South that he held the largest hand consistent with an original pass.

There was not much to the play, declarer taking all 13 tricks on a squeeze that developed automatically. West opened the diamond King [illegible] Ace [illegible] two rounds of trumps followed.

West had to keep a high diamond [illegible] Ace and dropped the King.

Vegetable Color Gives Natural Tints Without Permanent Dye

By ARLINE GOULD

YOU CAN'T FOOL us when you swear that, for all you care, they can "take that moon and wrap it up in cellophane" . . . that your theme song goes like this, "Down with moon and June and roses and rainbows . . . down with songs about Night and Day . . ." We can see right through you—you don't mean it at all. The nemesis of grey hair is really what's set your defense mechanism running.

Speak sharply to yourself and before you bog down in drabness, which is just where you're heading in that state of mind, learn what a proven vegetable coloring can do in returning your natural shade, with highlights added for good measure, without permanently dyeing the hair.

We speak of it particularly because it's gone through a new series of tests and is being reintroduced to Boston at one-third discount, which includes the liquid coloring itself and a remarkable fountain gadget that controls the process of application to absolute perfection.

• • •

[illegible] faded, streaked or gray hair [illegible] doesn't lighten dark hair [illegible] match dark hair growing in at the parts of bleached or hennaed locks.

Truly it offers marvels to the girl with prematurely grey hair, or in retouching hair that grows out between dye treatments, so there's never that dreadful, give-away demarkation. Its effect is quicker than a magician's hand, and the softness and fluffiness of the hair after the liquid dries may well be a source of gratified amazement to you!

A hollow rubber "stick" is the applicator, which is filled with the [illegible] you've chosen. Highly ingenious is the suction action of the sponge-like tip which insures even, smooth application when you use the proper "push" method. If you don't do it correctly, but try to blot or rub, the liquid simply doesn't budge enough to do the job! One of the simplest contrivances we've ever seen.

• • •

An ordinary shampoo will immediately remove it, though it won't rub off or stain hats or pillow cases. It doesn't stain the scalp either.

To learn all about the liquid hair stick which applies an instant tint to grey hair, keeps parts in perfect color between dye applications, and comes in shades that blend with your natural hair (it's to be had right now at one-third discount) phone Arline Gould, LIberty 4000, week-days until five, or write her at the Boston Evening American, inclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

ANSWER. Anything you can do to humor a dry sensitive skin in this climate of ours is all to the good. A powder that comes in a series of shades and is guaranteed to be non-allergic is a beneficent gesture in this respect. It goes on [illegible] and refuses to disintegrate into flakes after it has been on your skin. Surprisingly even to its makers it has been found to last and last. If you write in, enclosing a stamped self-addressed envelope or telephone me at Liberty 4000, I shall give you the name of this special formula powder especially prepared for super-sensitive skin, and also the name of the store where it may be purchased.

Martha Replies To Queries

FROM MARTHA LEE'S WEDNESDAY MORNING BROADCAST OVER STATION WMEX

NOW FOR some of those requests that have been accumulating.

We attempt to answer the greater portion of them by direct letters; but now and again someone wishes others to benefit by the recipes given.

One homemaker wants to know how to prepare braised short ribs such as she enjoys when eating out. And another request for the Spanish Steak. It seems it didn't get in the column the last time we gave it.

Then there's the lady who wanted to get [illegible]

Now for a few of the recipes. First we'll give that [illegible]

LEMON ICEBOX COOKIES

½ cup butter
1 cup sugar
1 egg
[illegible]
[illegible]
2 cups flour
1 teaspoon baking powder
Few grains of salt

[illegible] makes a delicious dessert [illegible]

SPANISH STEAK

1 flank steak
3 tablespoons flour
3 tablespoons fat or suet
[illegible] teaspoons salt
⅛ teaspoon pepper
2 onions, diced or sliced
1 green pepper, diced or sliced
[illegible]
2 cups canned tomatoes
1 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce

Score the steak on both sides [illegible] brown well on both sides in the hot fat. Add salt and pepper and cover with the sliced or diced onion and green pepper. Add the [illegible] tomatoes and Worcestershire [illegible] until tender, which will take about 1½ hours. Carve at the table or cut in strips for serving.

FRIED SWEET PEPPERS

6 large green peppers
⅛ teaspoon black pepper
1½ teaspoons salt
3 tablespoons bacon fat or butter
1 tablespoon flour

Wash the peppers and dry them [illegible] Serves 4.

BRAISED SHORT RIBS OF BEEF WITH VEGETABLES

3 lbs. short ribs of beef cut in pieces for serving
3 teaspoons salt
⅛ teaspoon black pepper
8 to 10 medium-sized potatoes
4 or 5 white turnips or equivalent amount of yellow turnip cut in portions
5 large onions
1 bunch small carrots
2 cups water

Wipe the meat with a damp cloth and rub with salt and pepper. Place in roasting pan uncovered and sear in a hot oven of 500 degrees F. for about one-half hour or until well browned, stirring about occasionally. Add water, cover tightly and bake for one hour at a temperature of 350 degrees F. Then add vegetables and continue cooking until vegetables are tender. Serve on a large platter and garnish with the cooked vegetables and parsley.

DROP LEMON WAFERS

½ cup sugar
½ tablespoon butter
1 egg
½ teaspoon grated lemon rind
1 teaspoon lemon juice
⅝ cup bread flour
⅛ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon baking powder
3 tablespoons milk

Cream sugar and butter, then beat in egg and lemon rind and juice. Sift flour, baking powder and salt together and add alternately with the 3 tablespoons of milk, beating after each addition until smooth. Drop from a teaspoon onto a greased baking sheet. Bake in a moderate oven of 350 degrees F. for about 7 minutes. It is well to place the spoons of batter well apart, as the dough spreads in baking.

Radioland Reflections

By N. F. T.

FEW of the dramatic features figure above the weekly "Cavalcade" settings (WEEI) if any at all, and the 8 to 8:30 half hour each Wednesday evening is consistently striking in the estimation of these ears.

No less than impressive is the story for radio re-enactment tonight, since "Cavalcade" comes upon the life and romantic career of Francis Scott Key, author of the "Star Spangled Banner" and hero of early America.

A descendant of John Key, 15th century poet laureate of England, the gifted young American writer was born to the stirring days that shaped the destiny of the United States and brought the national anthem into being in the year 1814 when extremely hectic times beset the baby nation. His life and the events associated with the [illegible] composition should make a magnificent drama to [illegible] [illegible] on [illegible] the coast to coast [illegible].

Sonja's Smorgasbord: La Henie Greets The Boston Press

SONJA HENIE SAT ERECT IN A STRAIGHT back chair, blonde, bland and dimpled. Hugo Quist, her manager and door greeter, crouched on the back of his neck in a soft, underslung chair, fumbling with his fingers. Mamma Thelma Henie perched like an immutable figure of prim conscience, saying and missing nothing. And the boys who had come to see the premier skate ballerina of the world return to Boston reposed in slack attitudes about the Garden's thirst-parlor where a smorgasbord had been arranged 'twixt press and Norway's cutie.

AUSTEN LAKE

Sonja had come fresh from the hands of her travelling masseuse, Miss Marion Gold, and her personal barber, Miss Betty King. And daughter, dear and charming, looked just what she is—a pure financial nugget from suede toe to glistening crown. She was wearing a little more cosmetic-dusting above her eyelids, a little trimmer plucking on her brows, but her lips were nature's own carmine. She smelt faintly of cedar chips, a fragrance like freshly sharpened lead pencils. But there were little lapses between her perky smiles, moments when the brown awareness of her eyes and bright dental flashes stopped to brood, as a housewife might wonder whether she had left the burner under the dinner beans.

The questions were stereotyped, her answers anticipated. Does she tire of [illegible] like a human canary possessed by press and public, hounded by money moochers and go-get-em salesmen? [illegible] reversed wide-eyed surprise. No! Is [illegible] more strenuous than trouping? [illegible] yes! [illegible] the eternal [illegible] "Costumes?" Perhaps thirty. Skates. Two pairs [illegible] boots from Germany. [illegible] a pair.

* * *

Mamma Henie Hovers Near

THERE WAS A LONG TABLE UNDER a big top table cloth, containing a jumble of nickeled hotel ware, assorted ginger ales and mineral water, buckets of ice and some dimpled bottles with baby ribbon at the throats. The boys chose their nourishment and sipped gingerly, a little conscious of the ladies.

She spoke with a cultivated coloratura, crossed with a natural bird chirp that ended in quick, rising inflections and was tipped with a trace of Nordic burr. Sometimes to Mamma she made sweet asides in her native tongue so that Mamma wriggled inside her stays, wrinkled an eyebrow or nodded. Possibly Sonja may have said: "These repetitious bores, Mamma, will they never let a lady put on "curl papers?" A white-coated waiter offers a tray of colored curlicues on crackers, segments of herring imbedded in paste, disguised cheese and other culinary oddities. Nuh-No! Sonja has eaten a four o'clock beefsteak. Instinctively she smooths the hips of her black plush dress. Eternal vigilance, Sonja! 'Ware lardy paddings.) But Mamma chooses a patty and nicks it daintily with her teeth.

Artiste to the tips of her rose-tinted nails, Sonja [illegible] polite and noncommittal contempt for her rival skate dancers, a pleasant tolerance and a deprecating arch of her penciled brows for the less gifted ladies. It is an attitude which springs less from egotism than self-confidence. Goot, ja—yes, but not great, no!

* * *

Sonja's Day Begins at Noon

A SPRIG OF PURPLE ORCHIDS SNUGGLE against her bosom. She entwines her silken limbs in supple, cruller twists beneath her chair. Does she still practice her intricate, school figures? Ahhh, no time (fingers twiddle as of escaping birds). Time, pouf! (She laughs along the length of her spine). Her days, she says enumerating on her fingers and lifting her eyes overhead to the stuffed sword fish, ends at 2 a. m. Supper after the show. Then bed. Breakfast at noon, an hour's massage, an interval with her mail while having her hair moulded, a dinner of solids at 4:30, an hour's nap and then the intricate makeup for the evening. Time, pouf!

Letters! Maybe 100 a day—most amoosing some, others sad! Money, ah money. So many needy people! But, tsk . . . (helpless uplifting of hands).

Her income? Furtive peep toward Mamma). She did not know. But the tax, ja—yes, enormous. Mamma looks anxious. Quist mourns on the company from under his brows, a look of pious penitence on his features. A lady journalist suggests that marriage may be just around the corner, and my lady shrugs, hugging her shoulders and making her mouth a crimson O, ("always they ask me thadt"), as though a man were the ultimate pinnacle of a woman's aim. Men were just so many chins, noses, gardenias and waistcoats in a passing blurr; men who sent flowers or suggested dinner or talked about things, all fine persons to be sure, but just men!

* * *

Rhythm of Curvalinear Line

THE GARDEN CLUB WAS A VIOLET HAZE. Layers of smoke hang level with the lights. More reporters come and Sonja reaches up her finger tips to each, ducks her head affably and smiles dentally, repeating the same answers in a patient ripple and preserving her rhythms of curvalinear line. A gradually graying light comes through the frosted windows whence the evening rumble of street traffic rises to an increasing crescendo. Time, pouf! Never enough in the day. Soon it will be necessary to put on her silken kilts and poise in the Garden's entrance tunnel to catch the Viennese lilt of lazy fiddles and become an animated skating doll.

She gives away her elfin smile, Mamma summons a nervous quirk at her mouth corners. Quist stops cracking his finger knuckles. They move toward the door and their passing creates little, following smoke eddies with the suction of departure. There are flecks of cigarette ash on the carpet, melted ice cubes swimming in the silver water cooler and a few scattered remnants of the culinary oddities. Sonja's smorgasbord is over.

British Opposed To Olympics

LONDON, Feb. 2 (AP).—[illegible] sentiment in Great Britain against [illegible] representation at the Tokyo Olympic games in 1940 is nationwide in scope, says Lord Aberdare, who will represent Great Britain at the meeting of the International Olympic Committee in Cairo in March.

Aberdare said a decision [illegible] would be made between [illegible] of the British [illegible] the movement against Tokyo [illegible] pointed out that the British [illegible] was [illegible] but that [illegible] sentiment against Japan he [illegible] judging from United States reports, international [illegible].

The British Olympic Committee last night discussed the apparent failure of Japanese officials to issue invitations for the games and drafted instructions for Lord Aberdare.

Whether Great Britain will accept an invitation to the games also was discussed.

"I don't think we will be prepared to make a statement of our views before the international meeting is held," Aberdare said. "But I doubt if we will be able to get the support to finance sending a team to Tokyo even if the committee decides to send one."

There is no question of taking the games away from Toyko, but, Aberdare added, "I believe true sportsmanship would indicate that Japan should put the question entirely in the hands of the international committee."

Climbing Canucks Rout Leafs As Bruins Shut Out Red Wings

Frenchmen Can Tie For Lead Tomorrow

By BILL GRIMES

A tough [illegible] was [illegible] a great [illegible] the Bruins [illegible] Red Wings [illegible] the 6-1 [illegible] Hawks [illegible] over Chicago [illegible] Toronto Maple Leafs' [illegible] Canada from the Maritimes to British Columbia.

Bruins chalked up their 19th victory of the season at the Wings' expense, and if they so choose they can coast from here and still make the payoffs.

In 31 games they have amassed 42 points and are still three points out in front of Rangers who hung a 6-1 defeat on Chicago Black hawks in New York.

Red Wings are now in a tough spot. They have played two more games than Black Hawks whom they are trailing by two and one half games.

FRENCHMEN FLYING

Maple Leafs haven't beaten an outstanding club since Jan. 8, when they took Rangers into camp at home, 3 to 2.

In the meantime, they have been tied by Chicago and Americans, won over Maroons, Chicago and Detroit and lost a 9-1 verdict to Bruins.

The Flying Frenchmen are now only one game behind the Maple Leafs, and if the Canucks come through with a win [illegible] night [illegible] will jump about 60 points.

Rangers, who were held to a 2 draw on Sunday in the Windy City, opened up on the Black Hawks last night and really went to town.

They ran in three goals in the first period, one in the middle frame and two in the final before Carl Voss scored the lone tally for the Hawks, which was his second in two seasons.

In Montreal, the Flying Frenchmen had scored five goals before the Leafs dented the strings. It was the fourth consecutive victory for the Canucks and their first of the season over Maple Leafs.

Bruins were hard pressed to beat the Red Wings.

Late in the first period, the Kraut line put on a three-man attack, which was started by Milt Schmidt and consummated by Bobby Bauer, who took a pass out from back of the Detroit cage from Woody Dumart.

ROSS GIVES BOYS REST

Late in the final period, "Schmidt [illegible] out of the pack while the Red Wings were putting on a power play. He raced the length of the ice, pulled Normie Smith out of position and tallied with

Lovely Sonja Previews Famed Nip-Up Before Garden Debut

Nip-Up Starts . . . There's the Turn . . . Up She Goes . . . Perfect Turn . . . Safe Landing . . . And That's That . . .

A glimpse of Sonja in action. This International News Reel [illegible] of Sonja's prize nip-up turn shows every step of the difficult feat. Miss Henie opens her five-night stand at the Boston Garden tonight, and her stay will break all Garden box-office records. Sonja is expected to gross over $50,000 as her share of the gate. Who said recession? Norway's leading lady competes in seven [illegible] at every performance. Her stamina is apparently limitless.

15,000 to Pack Garden Tonight As Sonja Opens Skating Revue

'Golden Girl' Plays Here Five Nights

By JACK CONWAY

Sonja Henie, the golden girl of the ice arena and the [illegible], will be greeted by [illegible] persons when she opens her Boston fancy and figure skating engagement at the Garden tonight.

The Garden is completely sold out other than for standing room.

During her five appearances here Sonja will be watched by more than 75,000 persons.

The dainty Norwegian girl has drawn $[illegible] at the box office during her present tour which included stands in [illegible], Cleveland, Detroit and New York. The Boston engagement will add $100,000 to this total.

MADE START HERE

As Sonja personally receives [illegible] per cent of the receipts she will be paid at the rate of $10,000 a performance.

Sonja had proved the greatest drawing card in the history of sports. People everywhere are eager to see her do her figure and fancy skating.

"I am glad to be back in Boston for tonight's show," said the vivacious Sonja today.

"It was at the ice carnivals of the Boston Skating Club at the Arena that I first gained recognition as a skater in the United States.

"It is wonderful to succeed in the movies, but I think I get more enjoyment out of my appearances at ice carnivals than any place else.

"I hope that in a small way I have been helpful to the children of the United States. I want to do everything possible to help and inspire them.

"I was delighted to read of the success scored by the Silver Skates Derby of the Boston Evening American-Sunday Advertiser.

"It gave hundreds of youngsters an opportunity to skate in competition under the best possible conditions.

"It was a privilege for me to donate a special trophy for the Silver Skates Derby.

"I hope I am in Boston when the Silver Skates Derby is held next year. I am anxious to see and enjoy it."

PERFECT PHYSICALLY

Hugo Quist, Sonja's manager, was enthusiastic over the way Sonja talked about youngsters skating.

"Sonja has helped increase interest in skating among the school children of the United States," said Hugo. "She has shown them how to gain health and become fine citizens by proper living and exercise.

"Sonja is anxious to remain a figure on the sports pages. It was where she started, and by keeping prominent in sports Sonja can do the most good for the greatest number of people.

"The American public admires Sonja because she is physically perfect, and a splendid type of wholesome [illegible].

"Success has not changed her.

Averages $10,000 A Performance

She is as unassuming and as graceful as when she first gained international fame as a little girl in Olympic competition."

Sonja will take part in seven numbers tonight. It is a long program, but her excellent physical condition will enable her to show to advantage.

There will be a supporting cast of 100 persons. It will be a dazzling Hollywood offering, but it will be Sonja's captivating skating and personality that will sweep through the entire show.

The 15,000 persons who will go to the Garden tonight will do so to get a glimpse at Sonja doing her skating magic.

The crowd will applaud and appreciate the other numbers on the program, but it will be the golden girl who will pull at the heart strings of the great gathering.

ASK EXTRA NIGHT

With the Sonja show a sellout for five nights other than for standing room, Walter Brown, general manager of the Garden, is making an effort to get the Norwegian girl to remain in Boston for a special performance on Monday night.

Walter has a habit of getting what he goes after and it is likely he will get Sonja and Hugo Quist to agree to the extra [illegible].

Sonja greeted members of the press at a special party at the Boston Garden Club. She took occasion to state she is in excellent condition for the show that opens tonight.

Triple Header At Armory Saturday

To keep [illegible] the fight for the championship of the Commonwealth Polo League, it is quite necessary that the Harvard varsity defeat the Danvers trio in their Saturday night match at the Armory.

This may not prove easy, however. Though Danvers has yet to enter the winning column it really has a strong team.

Close Race In Brookline Pin League

Four Points Separate First and Fourth Teams

A get-together of the bowlers of Brookline in 1929 resulted in the formation of the Brookline Bowling League, and the organization has been in active operation since.

Its great popularity is best told by the fact that business firms each week donate valuable prizes of wearing apparel, jewelry, etc., for high scores.

So evenly matched are the teams that the pennant winner each year can not be determined till almost the final games.

Such appears the case this season the four top teams, Odd Fellows, Cashman Motor Club, Tux Club and American Legion, being only four points apart in the league standing.

The high quality and ability of the bowlers is attested by the Cashman Motor Club having [illegible] of 566 and three string of 1633. Bill Rose is the king pin individually with 133 and 394 pinfalls to his credit.

Officials of the Brookline League are Charles H. Foster, president; John A. Carson, vice-president; George W. [illegible], treasurer and [illegible] A. [illegible], secretary.

For the first time in over 20 years Charles Richardson missed a season of the Old Timers. Goodnow's Pets were the rage that year and his Wildey team won the City League championship.

Ex-Big Leaguers On Valleyfield Ice Team

When the Boston Olympics square off with the Valleyfield Braves Sunday afternoon at the Arena they will face one of the most experienced clubs in the Provincial League.

This Valleyfield team, which defeated the Harrington men on their recent Canadian trip by a 3-2 count, sports two men who have just returned from the National Hockey League.

Rollie Reeves, a 180-pounder showed the locals some real skating and stick handling in their last encounter.

At right wing is another ex-big leaguer, Paul Goulet. Goulet, who lives in Three Rivers, Quebec, played for Detroit Red Wings before going to Valleyfield.

Coach Harrington put the fast-skating Paul Rowe on Goulet with instructions to forget about scoring and just keep an eye on his man. Neither Rowe nor Goulet scored a point.

Johnnie Lascelle, Braves' goalie and Henry Matte defense earned their spurs over in Paris, France, with the Francais Volants.

Lascelle is the nearest thing to [illegible] Boston fans will see this year.

MR. BOSTON

Sheldon Fairbanks' Sportsman's Show | Even Africa to Be Represented

By JACK CONWAY

SHELDON FAIRBANKS took time out from trying to pick a winner at Hialeah Park to ask me to attend the New England Sportsman's and Boat Show that opens at Mechanics Building on Saturday afternoon for eight afternoon and evening shows.

Mr. Boston

"Racing thoroughbred horses and trying to pick winners," said Sheldon, "is my pleasure, while conducting monster sportsman's shows is my business. I find one has to have a successful business to race horses without being troubled by too many headaches.

"It costs $2000 a year to keep a thoroughbred race horse, and it isn't a cinch he is going to win any purses. At one time I owned 15 thoroughbreds, and the overhead wasn't anything to cheer about."

I first came to know Fairbanks when Tex Rickard named him as general manager of the Boston Garden. In those carefree days everybody had a bundle of money under his arm, and the Garden made a huge profit.

Hockey played to capacity crowds as is the case this season. A world's heavyweight championship wrestling bout between Strangler Lewis and Gus Sonnenberg squeezed $72,000 into the Garden. Paul Bowser, the promoter, told Fairbanks of a night at the old Grand Opera House when he only drew $72 with a mat offering.

Boxing bouts featuring Jim Maloney, Dick Finnegan, Jake Zeramby, Al Mello and other local ring heroes drew anywhere from $20,000 to $54,000.

With so much money around, Fairbanks decided to do a little promoting on his own. He resigned his Garden job, and organized radio, home beautiful and sportsman's shows. He made money with all of them, but the sportsman's show surpassed his other successes. He now drops this attraction into Boston, Hartford, New York and other leading cities each year.

Fairbanks' horses have a keen interest in the sportsman's show. It assures them that they will continue to eat regularly even if they consistently run out of the money.

As a horse owner, Fairbanks developed Earl Porter as one of the turf's leading jockeys. Earl Porter, the horse, was named by Fairbanks after the famous jockey.

Outdoor Life During Winter Weather

I DO NOT dispute Fairbanks' claim that the New England Sportsman's and Boat Show is the greatest offering of its kind ever held anywhere.

There will be all kinds of outdoor exhibits from Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Massachusetts, Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, Quebec, the Hudson Bay country from far away Alaska and even from Africa as well as from Florida. It apparently is a sort of an international sportsman's show.

I have never missed one of Sheldon Fairbanks' shows, and so will punch the old time clock again at Mechanics Building on Saturday afternoon. I take my outdoor life in an in-town building. Then when one gets tired of looking at the wonders of nature and the most modern of camp equipment and the best of boats, he can page a taxicab and drop into the Merry-Go-Round or some other night spot where you don't have to put bait on your hook to get a thrill out of life.

* * *

Fishing and Hunting in New Hampshire

I CONFESS I made two serious attempts to become a fisherman and hunter. On one occasion I invaded the solitude of Silver Lake at Conway, N. H., with Dr. Martin H. Spellman and Jack Donahue, former Boston College football star who now teaches and also coaches football in the Quincy schools.

I had a guide who baited my hook, rowed my boat and told the trout when to nibble at my bait. I caught two five pound lake trout, but even that thrill didn't cause me to ever go fishing again. I retired on my laurels.

I later tried hunting. My guide suggested that we go after bear or deer, but I told him I would compromise on a squirrel. There were not any squirrels loose on that particular day, and the only excitement I got was pulling the guide out of a brook when he stumbled and did a nose dive into the icy waters.

I later persuaded the guide to act as my caddy as I shot golf at North Conway, N. H.

That night the guide suggested we try hunting again.

"What can we get at this hour of the night?" I demanded. "I thought most animals went to sleep at night."

"We'll go along the railroad," said the guide, "and carry flashlights and sticks."

"Are we going hunting for a locomotive?" I demanded.

"No, we'll get skunks," went on the guide. "The flashlights will attract the skunks, and then we'll sneak up behind them and knock them for a loop by walloping them on their backs."

"What if the skunks see me coming?" I pressed.

"You should never let a skunk see you approaching him," went on the guide. "Skunks have absolutely no social etiquette."

I decided it would be much more interesting to spend the evening in front of an open fire than to risk having a skunk present me with his calling card.

Of course, Sheldon Fairbanks will not have any skunks in his show, but he will have about every other animal you can think of as well as the latest in every branch of outdoor life.

'I'll Take 30'

Joe Di Mag Willing To Compromise

NEW YORK, Feb. 2 (INS)—"The next move is up to the Yankees," said Joe DiMaggio as he departed for his home in San Francisco sans contract.

Jolting Joe failed to contact Col. Ruppert or any of the Yankee officials who weren't apprised of his departure.

"I wanted $40,000," said DiMaggio, "but if they give me $30,000 and do it quickly, I'll sign—but not a penny less."

There was only silence from the club which insists that the next move is up to the player.

Ol' Perseverance Made Jim Turner What He Is Today

—By JOE CASHMAN—

JIM TURNER PEERED through his hotel room window to Copley square below, a scene he had never glimpsed before in its winter trimmings.

JOE CASHMAN

If he wasn't musing how right the sage who first cracked about life being a funny proposition he should have been.

A year ago this month the Boston baseball writers staged their first dinner. They honored New England boys then making good in the big leagues.

All anybody at that gathering knew about a guy named Turner was that he was one of the many unsung rookies who were getting [illegible]

FAME AND POPULARITY haven't changed [illegible]

[illegible]

"The greatest catcher I've ever pitched to or ever hope to see. Jim says of Al Lopez, his battery mate. "He pulls your pitches right by those batters.

"If I hadn't had him to tip me off to rivals' weaknesses on my first trip around the circuit, I wouldn't be a guest here now.

"And those two guns in the outfield belonging to Vince DiMaggio and Gene Moore stopped more hitters than my pitching."

Did he think he could win 20 games again this season?

"Well, I'm in shape to do it, and I'll sure try; but doing it is something else again. I'll have to be lucky."

[illegible]

This evening will get an unforgettable thrill out of handing the Nick Flatley plaque to James R. Turner this evening.

WHILE TURNER gazed out of his hotel room window, over at Fenway Park the blond Joe Vosmik was preparing his response to local fandom's welcome.

Here's another young man Boston is going to grow to like immensely.

Joseph already is head over heels in love with Boston.

"How could I help being?" he chirps.

"I get away from St. Louis, the hottest spot in the world, land in the greatest baseball town in the country, join up with the swellest bunch of bosses in the business, and find myself with a short leftfield wall to aim at for 77 games a season.

"I'm so tickled, I still find it hard to believe I've been that lucky."

Marse Tom Yawkey and Manager Joe Cronin look on admiringly while the clouting Cleveland and of "find" of Billy Evans orates.

Boss Tom and Pilot Joe think Vosmik will greatly strengthen the Sox but both master minds agree it's a flock of kid pitchers who'll make or break the Fenway flock this season.

"Says Cronin frankly, "Our young pitchers must come through or we'll show little improvement. I'm keen about taking the gamble, though, because if two or three of the lads should produce, we'd have a real chance of winning the flag.

"I think Emerson Dickman is a cinch to stick, and I have high hopes for Dick Midkiff.

"Charlie Wagner and Jim Bagby I don't know anything about, from observation, but our scouts are willing to stake their reputations on the prediction that each will be a winner for us this year."

Jesse Owens' Five Put on Blacklist

NEW YORK, Feb. 2 (INS)—The Northwestern Ohio Association of the A. A. U. notified the parent body of the suspension of Jesse Owens' Olympians, a touring basketball team, accompanied by the former Ohio State Negro athlete and Olympic champion.

The action was based on charges of professionalism and reports that Owens, disbarred as an amateur, had been playing part-time with the traveling team.

Participation by Owens automatically would affect the standing of the entire team. The Owens' troupe has been on a tour to the Coast.

Husky Five Plays Brown Tonight

The Huskies have beaten Clark, Lowell Textile, Colby, Bates and Maine, and have dropped games to Harvard, Maine, Rhode Island and Williams.

Brown has triumphed over the Alumni, Clark and Tufts, and has lost to Harvard, Connecticut State, Rhode Island and Worcester Tech.

Kempen, Yates Lead 'Chi' Race

CHICAGO, Feb. 2 (AP)—Piet Van Kempen and Cecil Yates, the Dutch-American combination, paced the field in the international six day bicycle race today, enjoying a two-lap advantage over three teams tied for second place.

Killian and Vopel, the German team which was an early favorite to win, occupied one place in the triple tie for second place.

Grimes

Gives Reason for Holding Mungo

NEW YORK, Feb. 2 (INS)—Manager Burleigh Grimes of the Brooklyn Dodgers explained succinctly today why the recent efforts of the St. Louis Cardinals, Chicago Cubs and Pittsburgh Pirates to land his star pitcher, Van Mungo, came to naught. He said:

"The players they wanted to give us will not be in the league, unless as coaches, in five years —and that's just about when Van Mungo should be the star of the circuit."

Budge Considering High Pro Offers

MELBOURNE, Australia, Feb. 2 (INS)—Prior to leaving Australia following a series of exhibition matches, Donald Budge, American tennis ace, declared today he is seriously considering a number of "high offers" to turn professional.

"I hope to return to Australia," Budge said, "but it will probably be as a professional. I must give serious consideration to the high money offers that have been made me."

Plowboys Lose After 84 Victories

STEPHENVILLE, Tex., Feb. 2 (AP)—The Plowboys of John Tarleton Junior College relaxed today.

Their streak of 84 consecutive basketball victories was broken last night by the San Angelo Junior College Rams, 27-26, at San Angelo.

The defeat was an answer to Coach W. J. Wisdom's prayer: "If I could get this eternal pressure off the boys they would turn in a good game; they are so nervous they miss 80 to 90 per cent of the crip shots."

Kerr Deprived Of Shutout

NEW YORK, Feb. 2 (INS)—New York Rangers scored a 6-1 victory over the Chicago Black Hawks in Madison Square Garden before a crowd of 12,000 fans.

Alex Shibicky was outstanding for the Rangers, with three goals and an assist to his credit.

The Rangers lost no time in going into action and tallied three goals in the first period when Watson, Shibicky and Patrick scored. Their fourth came in the second when Shibicky beat Karakas on a penalty shot. It was the first free try which has been converted here this season.

Neil Colville got the Rangers fifth tally in the third and Shibicky scored number 6 a minute later.

With only one second left to play, Voss tallied on passes from Gottselig and Jenkins to rob Kerr of a well-earned shut out.

Samara Takes On Johnson At Arena

Mat Giants Clash in Bowser-Gordon Mat War

The ringside at the Arena tonight will be packed with cauliflower ears when top notch wrestlers from all parts of the country will be on hand to witness the showdown in the battle royal between Paul Bowser, Boston Garden promoter, and Charlie Gordon of the Arena.

Tor Johnson, 325 pound ace wrestler, has been selected by Bowser to knock off Seelie Samara, claimant of the world's heavyweight wrestling crown. Charley Gordon, Arena promoter, who forced Bowser into admitting his giant Negro was a title threat, states this will be the last battle so far as he is concerned with Bowser. Win or lose Gordon is quoted as saying:

"I am not going to bother with any more of Bowser's men. It is quite apparent if the best wrestlers he can send to us is Billy Bartush then he indeed is in need of some wrestlers, for Ted Germaine could pin Bartush every five minutes of the day and still be able to wrestle at night. So far as Tor Johnson is concerned he may have plenty of weight and strength, but in wrestling, science is what counts, and I expect Samara to finish Johnson off inside of five minutes."

Paul Bowser has stated that all Gordon is looking for is free publicity and was cagey enough to have him send his top notchers to the Arena for "no." However, the Boston Garden promoter feels sure tonight will settle the Gordon-Samara combination.

In another special feature 2-3 falls Art O'Mahoney, the Irish youth, will tackle Sailor Adams, U. S. Navy. Armand LeDonne vs. Ted Germaine while in another bout Carmon Carone will clash with Ike Goldberg. Everett Steele will meet Ed McNeil, while Pat Schaffer of South California meets Frank Eident.

Amateur Ring Stars Clash

The regular weekly boxing show will be staged at the Boston Arena next Monday night when the Irish-American A. A., New England's leading organization in the promotion of the sport, offers another bang-up card, showing the outstanding "pure" mitt artists in this section.

There will be eight classes of competition—six in the open divisions at 112 pounds, 135 pounds, 147 pounds, 160 pounds, 175 pounds and heavyweights. All entries close with Tom Kanaly at the Boston Arena where further information regrding the show may be obtained.

More youngsters are taking up boxing than ever before, and much of this interest can be traced back to the Irish-American A. A. The South Boston club has given the boys every opportunity to develop their boxing by sponsoring these regular Monday night contests, and it is from competition alone that the battlers improve.

Next Monday night's bouts will be the last tryout for selection of a team to represent the United States in the big International Show that the "Irish" will stage at the Boston Garden on February 14. In this tournament there will be teams from Ireland and Canada as well as the U. S. A. The Irish boxing team are now on the high seas, having sailed from Cobb, Ireland, last Sunday. They will reach our shores early next week and will immediately go into serious training for the coming contests which mean so much to all of the boys.

Roy Kelley to Box Poster At Garden

Brookline Youngster to Seek Revenge for Recent Setback

Roy Kelley, Brookline Butcher Boy, returned to work in the gym today [illegible] his second fight with Lou Poster of New York, eight-round semifinal of the [illegible] A. C. boxing show at the Boston Garden one week from tonight.

Poster and Kelley put on one of the most spectacular slugfests seen in Boston recently, and there's a chance they may repeat and steal the show from the main bout—Merry Mike Kaplan, Dorchester, vs. Honey Mellody, Charlestown, for the New England lightweight championship over the 10-round distance.

With Kelley leading comfortably in their first meeting, Poster cut loose a wild barrage in the final two rounds, bouncing the Brookline boy off the canvas no less than six times in the final two rounds for long counts and took the decision.

It was all a mistake, Kelley claims and asked Valenti to get him another crack at Poster to prove it.

Larruping Lou willingly agreed and Valenti added a second attractive bout to his program for one week from tonight at the Garden.

Kaplan, termed by some "another Benny Leonard," a youngster who has ripped through 19 straight professional fights without a setback, beating such rugged opposition as Pat Foley and Eddie Zivic, has become a slight favorite to lift the N. E. lightweight title from Mellody.

Kaplan's boxing has been more amazing that ever in recent workouts and being in very solid condition, is spending almost all his time in sharpening his shots for Mellody. Kaplan and his admirers insist he can't miss although Mellody is a tough problem for any of them.

Princess Baba to Give Her Answer

Will Decide Whether Bob Gregory Can Referee Thesz-Casey Title Mat Bout

Bob Gregory, handsome Englishman, must first get permission from his beautiful wife, Princess Baba of Sarawak, if he is to referee the world's heavyweight wrestling championship match between Louis Thesz of St. Louis, the titleholder, and Steve (Crusher) Casey of Ireland, No. 1 challenger, at Boston Garden on Friday night, February 11.

When Thesz refused to let a Boston referee officiate and Casey would not agree on Harry Sharp, veteran St. Louis arbiter, Promoter Paul Bowser hit upon the idea of using Gregory, English light-heavyweight champion and an experienced referee. Accordingly, he telegraphed an offer to Paul Damski of New York, general manager of the Princess Baba tour of America.

PRINCESS TO DECIDE

The following telegram was received by Promoter Bowser from Damski:

"Princess Baba has taken so definite a stand against her husband continuing his wrestling activities that I hesitate to again bring up the subject, especially while dickering with the Hollywood movie people. There is a bare possibility that she may be swayed to permit Bob Gregory to act as referee but I am making no promises.

"I do know that she desired to remain in Boston a while longer to continue her studies of New England's educational system. The Princess is earnestly interested in charity and if you can see your way clear to donate a portion of the world's championship match proceeds to some deserving charity let me know and I will see what can be done. You certainly are persistent. Best regards.—Paul Damski."

Princess Baba and her party are expected back in Boston from New York early today and Promoter Bowser immediately will put up the proposition to her. Meanwhile, he has contacted Martin Thesz, father of the champion, and Jack Albright, manager of Casey, and both sides are willing to accept Gregory as third man in the ring. So, the whole thing hangs on the decision from the Princess.

THESZ IN CONDITION

Louis Thesz came out of his recent battle with Everett Marshall without so much as a scratch or bruise and is showing brilliant wrestling ability in his St. Louis workouts, according to word from Sam Muchnick, former St. Louis newspaper man and the champion's personal representative.

However, Marshall did not fare so well. He was so badly mussed up by Thesz that Billy Sandow, his manager, had to cancel 10 wrestling dates for him. Thesz is the first young man to beat Marshall over a long stretch of years, and the St. Louis youth twice has turned the trick in the last 90 days.

"I would like to have Thesz in Boston to do his training, but his father, who is his manager, is against it," Muchnick writes. "However, I suppose Mr. Thesz is right. He wants to watch the kid work. He has great influence over Lou, and the elder Thesz' tutelage carried the kid to the championship. According to our present plans, the champion and his party will arrive in Boston at 11:10 a. m. the day before the battle. Lou has a fine staff of training partners and a dandy gymnasium in which to work, and is getting in marvelous condition."

* * *

Casey will establish local training quarters at Jerry Buckley's Gymnasium down in Friend street, Saturday, and work daily until the day of the match.

Jack Albright, his manager, is busy lining up training mates.

"It's hard to get boys to work with Steve, as I explain to them he will show them no mercy in the drills," Albright said yesterday. "However, I will have three or four tough boys lined up by Saturday.

* * *

How important Casey regards this match, and the confidence he has that he will win and lift the title from Thesz, was evident when it leaked out from Manager Albright that Steve cabled an invitation to four of his brothers at Sneen, Ireland, to make the trip here for the battle.

"He didn't give them enough time, and they cabled back best wishes and news that they couldn't reach here in time," Albright says.

However, later Casey expects to bring his brothers to America. Three are crack wrestlers and the fourth is far better than an average heavyweight boxer.

FARR REFUSES BAER BOUT

'Licked Him Once,' Welshman Says

NEW YORK, Feb. 2 (INS)—Negotiations to pair Tommy Farr and Max Baer in a return contest in Madison Square Garden on March 11, were abandoned when Farr declined the bout and instead offered to meet Max Schmeling on a winner-take-all basis.

"I eliminated Baer once, and I can't get the idea of having to do it over again," said Farr.

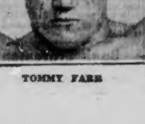
"If Schmeling is sincere about engaging in another tune-up jam before meeting Joe Louis, I would like to accommodate him.

"I am sure there will be no squabble over the terms. In fact, I am ready to go, winner take all.

"I am eager to re-establish myself here and would prefer, if necessary, to wait until the fall to force a match with the winner of the Louis-Schmeling scrap.

"I've done everything Mike Jacobs has asked of me.

"Because I lost a questionable decision to Braddock is no reason why I should have to go through the field of challengers again.



TOMMY FARR

Wants to Take on Max Schmeling

"If Jacobs is unable to line Schmeling up for me, I may return home."

Tommy claimed his trip here set him back approximately $35,000, which includes the $17,500 he paid Ted Broadribb, his former pilot, to release him from their pact that expired March 15.

He feels he lost another $100,000 by not remaining abroad.

Joe Louis, Nathan Mann and Jacobs must deposit $5000 forfeits with the New York Boxing Commission Friday to bind their title go in the Garden February 23.

The commission wired Gus Greenlee, manager of John Henry Lewis, inquiring whether or not he has entered into a contract for the light heavyweight champion to defend his crown against Tiger Fox or any other opponent.

Flight of Dollar Linked to Fear Of Devaluation

Haney Sees New Drift To Deal Monetary Manipulation

By LEWIS HANEY
(Professor of Economics, New York University)

NEW YORK, Feb. 2—Why has the dollar declined in foreign exchange?

Why has the flow of gold to this country almost entirely ceased?

The answers are so important, and at the same time so simple, that we should all understand them.

The first thing to note is that the pound sterling has been quoted at over $5.01. This means that it takes over $5.01 to get one pound, although the old par of exchange used to be $4.866 and recently the exchange rate has been around $4.99.

Clearly, the dollar has gone down. Clearly, many people want pounds instead of dollars, meaning that they want to transfer their funds from this country to England. Even French money is not only fleeing from the French new deal, but is also fleeing from ours.

* * *

The reason for this flight from the dollar is to be found in the fear that something will be done by the administration to depreciate our currency or to harm investments, or both. Both foreigners and our own citizens who have money on deposit or invested here, are trying to get it away.

At the present time rumors are that further devaluation of the dollar will be adopted by the administration. I am inclined to believe, however, that fear of what may be done in the way of taxes, labor policies and government interference with business has been a considerable factor.

Foreign investors fear "nonmonetary controls," and so sell our securities. They fear "monetary controls," and so sell dollars for pounds.

* * *

The drift in our country is certainly toward further monetary manipulation. And for the following reasons:

First, we are in a bad depression. With unemployment growing and relief expenditures mounting rapidly. (Important elections lie ahead. And the New Dealers are going to keep the voting palms greased.)

Second, Mr. Roosevelt has already begun to threaten business by saying that business men must give employment or else the government will start spending more.

Third, the spending clique at Washington is active. Hopkins is back. Eccles has spoken of spending the gold sterilization fund to prime the pump.

Fourth, spending for non-revenue producing rearmament and building is on the way. (Incidentally, the silver buying program goes on.)

Fifth, phony funds in abundance are readily available for inflationary spending. Beginning with the billion or so of dollars in gold set aside in the Treasury's "inactive account" as a part of the sterilization program. By "desterilizing" this gold, the excess reserves of the banks would be increased, thus enabling the sale of government bonds. There is the "profit" on silver. Then, too, there is always that mythical "social security reserve!"

Finally, There is no sign of any remedy for our fundamental troubles. This means continued waste and eventual bankruptcy. As long as New Deal politics and ethics prevail over common sense economics. The United States will be safe for neither dollars nor democracy.

* * *

But I do not believe devaluation is seriously contemplated at present.

1—As noted above, there is plenty to spend without it.

2—There is no strong political group now advocating devaluation.

3—We have learned that monetary uncertainty defeats inflation.

4—The tendency would be to await further international developments before resorting to the old devaluation game.

What I do believe is that the danger of further inflation is steadily growing. The only question is:

Will it be credit inflation with business cooperation, or will it be money inflation with dictatorship?

The foreign rumor mongers are probably wrong about "devaluation," but they are dead right about dollar depreciation—in one way or another.

Curb Market In Narrow Range

NEW YORK, Feb. 2 (AP)—Stocks drifted quietly on the curb exchange today, with a few issues showing substantial gains in morning trading.

Montgomery Ward "A," Sherwin Williams, Todd Shipyard and Singer Sewing Machine were up around a point or more. Niagara Hudson Power, United Gas, and Brazilian Traction tended higher in the utilities group. Lake Shore Mines was up a shade, while Newmont Mining slipped around a point.

Court Approves Rail Purchase

NEW HAVEN, Feb. 2 (AP)—Trustees of the New Haven Railroad, in the process of reorganization, today announced approval of the Federal District Court for the purchase of 50 additional lightweight, streamlined, air-conditioned passenger coaches and 10 additional Diesel switching locomotives.

The estimated cost of the coaches is $2,100,000 and of the locomotives $760,000.

Moley Suggests Housing Program

Former Roosevelt "Brain Truster" Urges Creation of Home Building Industry As Cure for Depression

Editor's Note—A vital suggestion for improving business is outlined in this—the fourth and final—article based on an exclusive interview with Raymond Moley, famous economist.)

By JAMES L. KILGALLEN
International News Service Staff Correspondent
(Copyright, 1938, by International News Service)

NEW YORK, Feb. 2—Tackle the depression by creating a home building industry in America, is the advice of Raymond Moley, formerly President Roosevelt's No. 1 "brain truster."

Moley says this industry—housing—could be made bigger than the automobile industry!

He pointed out that it was the private building of low-priced houses for the people that pulled England out of the depression of 1931.

"Millions of Americans are without decent homes," Moley declared in an interview today. "Our next big market—a market so gigantic that it will generate lasting prosperity—is in the home."

Moley does not refer to government housing, which is a minor factor in the big picture he visualizes. He means the building of inexpensive houses by private enterprise at costs within the reach of all classes of people. Homes for the masses of American urban and suburban dwellers.

PUT MILLIONS TO WORK

Such activity would put millions of men to work. It would create business for the many new products—all the way from new fabrics to new electrical devices—that go into the making of a home.

Moley depored the "throwing of dirt" and the blaming of one another for the depression and urged, "let's have some action."

He declared the government has got to bring together the factors involved in the home building industry. Those factors are there, namely: Labor, materials and financing. A government agency could do this.

"Labor has got to be willing to take an annual wage instead of holding out for high daily and hourly wages," said Moley. "The net of that would be that the laborer would have more money at the end of the year than he now has.

"More houses would be built. More materials would be manufactured and sold. Employment would pick up. Money now idle would be set to work.

"By having the government back of a central agency, all factors involved could be brought into an agreement.

"Call in William Green, president of the A. F. of L. If Green can't deliver then summon the heads of unions in various cities. They could be talked to by the President. As for John L. Lewis of the CIO—he doesn't figure importantly in the building trades.

"Call in the material manufacturers who deal with the cost of building. Call in the people who lend the money for building purposes—the bankers and insurance company heads. Get the thing going in a practical way."

He said at least 1,500,000 of the nation's unemployed are from the building industries, adding:

"They would have jobs if we can get a real building program under way."

TOPIC OF RELIEF

Moley shifted to the topic of relief—a problem involved in any actively which offers great promise of stimulating employment.

"We want to keep relief to a minimum," said Moley. "I'd go on record in favor of returning the administration and payment of relief to the local communities and the states.

"Payment of relief should be on a 50-50 basis, the Federal government paying 50 per cent and the local government 50 per cent. Then let the local communities do what they please—let them decide on either direct relief or work relief, whichever they deem advisable, for their communities.

"Thus you would break up this colossal federal machine of relief. It's expensive and a menace to our political institutions because the relief machine lends itself to use for political purposes.

"A 50-50 handling of relief would cut expenditures of the federal government. It would help toward balancing the budget. It would put the burden of direction on the communities and if anything went wrong the communities would have to shoulder the blame. It would relieve the pressure on the federal government."

Moley concluded the interview by characterizing the present economic situation as an "emergency." He urged "action" on the suggestions he had made and outlined in this—and the three preceding—articles.

Falls in Line With Views on Labor

WASHINGTON, Feb. 2 (INS)—The suggestion of Raymond Moley for a huge private housing program falls directly in line with organized labor's view that housing comprises the best method to bring business recovery, but John L. Lewis' CIO does not believe private industry can do the job.

Lewis said only a five billion dollar federal housing program could speed up the wheels of industry sufficiently to provide jobs for a material portion of the unemployed.

"Private housing," said Lewis, "is not sufficient. The federal government should undertake a federal building program, and spend not less than $5,000,000,000 to end business recession. No additional taxes would be necessary. The money coming into the Social Security fund, now idle, could be put to work in this constructive program."

All Wall Street Concerns Not Heartless

Forbes Cites Firm Which Found Jobs For Discharged

By B. C. FORBES

All Wall Street concerns are not heartless. Indeed. My observation has been that stock exchange firms and New York banks are among the most considerate employers in America, matched only by numbers of very large corporations and a sprinkling of smaller firms.

Read this exclusive, human-interest record:

An old-established stock exchange firm found itself under the unhappy necessity of reducing its employees by 40. The partners discussed and pondered the situation repeatedly, conscientiously.

The decision reached was that two of the most influential members of the firm would be released from all other duties in order to devote their time exclusively to digging up positions for those to be released.

What have been the results?

I have been furnished with a most detailed record.

Briefly, weeks of trudging and trudging, interviewing and interviewing by the two partners resulted in placing 23 of the 40, in pensioning four of the older workers, and in disposing satisfactorily of all but eight of those let go.

"We are still looking for work for these eight," the firm informs me.

This occurrence is peculiarly gratifying to me because 30 years ago I began warning corporate and other employers that they must not expect to continue forever throwing workers on the street without giving one thought as to what would become of them.

The incident confirms many other convincing evidences that an increasing number of employers do today feel responsibility for doing their very best on behalf of those who have served them.

Having had to appear before the New York State legislative committee investigating re-employment of the middle-aged, my mind has been dwelling seriously on this whole subject of the human equation in business and industry.

Looking ahead—perhaps 10 years, mayhap 20 years—what I see is that the right of employers to hire and fire will be drastically curtailed.

I can picture a day when any concern engaging a worker, man or woman, will be held responsible for providing for that worker more or less permanently.

It never has seemed right to me that any employer could take on one thousand or several thousand workers for "seasonal" employment and then chase them all out of his plant without having to give a single thought as to what would become of them. As to how they and their families could eat.

At this stage of our economic and social and political development, the prevailing idea is that the government must look after everybody needing looking after.

My study of the whole problem leads me to believe that by and by industry, industrial enterprises, individual employers, will have to shoulder far more of the responsibility for taking care of those whose services they requisition.

That ways and means will have to be devised by employers to avert "seasonal" employment. That once workers are taken on by an employer, it will be his responsibility, rather than the responsibility of taxpayers, to enable them to maintain themselves.

All this may sound "radical," may sound Utopian. But I believe it is coming.

So. N. E. Telephone Earnings Increase

NEW HAVEN, Ct., Feb. 2 (AP)—President Harry C. Knight of the Southern New England Telephone Co. reported 1937 net earnings of $3,350,569 at the annual stockholders' meeting.

This compared with earnings of $3,073,379 for 1936 and represented $8.45 per share of common stock.

A total of $3,110,000, or $7.75 a share, was distributed during the year in dividends, an increase of $600,000 over the 1936 distribution.

President Knight said 17,929 new telephones were placed in service during the year, bringing the total to an all-time high of 337,474. Operating revenues rose to $17,936,338 from $16,774,233.

C. B. S. Net Equals $2.52 on Common

NEW YORK, Feb. 2 (AP)—Columbia Broadcasting System, Inc., in a preliminary statement for the year 1937, reported net earnings of $4,297,600, equal to $2.52 a common share, against $3,755,500, or $2.20 a common share in 1936.

The company pointed out the foregoing per share earnings for both years were calculated upon the 1,707,950 shares of $2.50 par value stock "presently outstanding or to be outstanding" upon completion of exchange of the old $5 par value stock.

New Loan Policy by U. S. Seen

Small Industries Will Be Offered Credit In Proposed Plan

By HUGH E. BRADSHAW

Small business is not only having its day at the Washington round table, but it looks as though a place is going to be made for it in the lines formed at the paying tellers' windows in various government loaning agencies.

It is doubtful that anyone will argue that small enterprise is not entitled to the same federal loan accommodation that is extended to large units. The rub comes in the method used and the reasons offered for superseding private agencies. Finally it must be determined if at a time like the present small business men really want or have a need for more credit. Taking the last first it is extremely questionable that a federal loan would be extended to any small enterprise that did not enjoy the best standing, with due regard to its size. As a consequence those passing on the loans would probably lean backwards in poor times to make sure that they were not to be used for the sole purpose of postponing an otherwise unavoidable bankruptcy.

• • •

Next consider the matter of cause behind the latest loan proposals. First comes the expense of raising money through new issues of stock or bonds; supposing the SEC is not a barrier. Then come the legal restrictions which prevent local banks from buying such issues for their own investment account. These things the planners infer make it necessary for government to do the job. As to how it will be done it is hard to say. Several schemes have been put forward, with that calling for attaching to the RFC a system of intermediate credit banks having the inside track. The last seems feasible enough provided it follows the pattern of housing loans where private agencies handle the transaction with the support and backing of the government. But further direct entrance of Washington bureaus into investment banking is sure to find plenty of opposition.

INFLATION AGAIN

Inflation has slipped into the boardrooms again. Whether or not the relatively sustained upward performance of gold stocks or the thoughts of new government spending via deficit financing are responsible is immaterial just as long as it is there. As a personal matter this writer is inclined to ignore inflation at this time regardless of long time prospects. There is little point in going into the gold stock situation again other than to say reduced costs make any producer of goods or raw materials with a definite market at a fixed price relatively richer. It is simply a question of a larger difference between the total cost of operation and total income. Which means a larger net income.

• • •

As for additional pump priming by government on a large scale all anyone can say is that there are few, if any, evidences of strong pressure at present. That it will grow as time passes and recovery lags, according to personal ideas and geographical viewpoint, is not to be doubted. But even though one grants the markets are all seeing and all wise it is difficult to see them discounting inflation from such a direction until the pressure or urge is more clearly defined.

INDUSTRIALS RESIST

The industrial section of the stock market so far this week has displayed a disinclination to go the way so many bears confidently prophesied it would. However, as we pointed out on Monday, the test of its position is not going to come during rallying periods, but rather during a reactionary spell. Then, when trading conditions are against it and sellers are confident, if resistance is once again displayed we will feel that the latest selling drive has failed of its purpose. And the purpose, intended or otherwise, was to drive all averages into new low ground; paving the way for reasoning, under accepted market theory, that a new and extensive leg of the long decline had begun.

Building Material Issues Feature Listless Market

Caution Among Steel Buyers Intensified

NEW YORK, Feb. 2 (AP)—Steel buying is marking time, awaiting clarification of the price outlook, Iron Age indicated today in its weekly review of the steel industry.

"Caution among steel buyers has been intensified by the recent statement from President Roosevelt on the subject of wages and prices," the publication said.

"While a survey conducted by one large steel company among its customers disclosed virtually unanimous opposition to a reduction in steel prices at the present time, the fact stands out that scarcely any are willing to add to their steel inventories until the issue of both wages and prices is determined by the result of negotiations which start next Monday between the United States Steel Corp. and the Steel Workers organizing committee for renewal of the existing labor contract."

RATE AT 31 PER CENT

Whether the action of U. S. Steel and Jones & Laughlin Steel Corp., two largest signatories of the SWOC contracts, in reducing working time of all salaried employes, points to a wage reduction for mill workers cannot even be surmised, the organ said.

Only one steel company of those not governed by labor contracts has reduced wages, it pointed out. That company, it was added, was Wickwire-Spencer Steel Co., which announced a cut of 20 per cent for both salary and wage earners.

After four weeks of consecutive advances, operations of the steel industry this week fell 2½ points to 31 per cent of capacity, the publication estimated.

Little new steel buying was reported.

Heavy melting steel scrap has declined 50 cents a ton at Cleveland, but the Iron Age scrap price composite remains unchanged at $14 a ton.

Tax Collections Higher in 1937

WASHINGTON, Feb. 2 (AP)—The Internal Revenue Department reported its collections from all sources rose from $3,787,336,060 in 1936 to $5,617,088,564 in 1937.

Income tax collections increased more than a million dollars, from $1,551,652,596 in 1936 to $2,584,977,831 in 1937. These included collections from corporations, which rose from $811,720,207 to $1,265,963,734, and from individuals, which rose from $739,932,288 to $1,318,993,896.

Miscellaneous internal revenue increased from $2,232,537,753 to $2,253,039,285. Payroll taxes, a new source, totaled $679,071,637. Because of invalidation of the agricultural adjustment act there were no 1937 collections of agricultural adjustment taxes, which in 1936 yielded $3,145,711.

Gets High Post In Doremus

Clifford B. Reeves, former newspaper man, has been elected vice-president and director of Doremus & Co., advertising agents.

Mr. Reeves joined the Doremus organization in 1933 as service director. Prior to that he was a member of the publicity department of the Guaranty Trust Co., and later research manager and a director of the investment banking firm of J. G. White & Co.

Quentin I. Smith has joined Albert Frank-Guenther Law, Inc., as an account executive in the agency's New York office. He was formerly vice-president and an account executive of the Hudson Advertising Co. and previously associated with the New York Post and the Rodney E. Boone organization.

LONDON, Feb. 2 (AP)—Bar silver 20 3-16d, unchanged. (Equivalent 45.49 cents.)

General List Higher Near Close

NEW YORK, Feb. 2—Buyers pushed selected shares a little higher in the stock market today, but gains generally were small.

Near the fourth hour advances of fractions to a point or more ruled, but there was a sprinkling of losers throughout the list.

Building material issues, spurred by final enactment of the administration's housing bill yesterday, provided the best showing. Merchandising, aircraft and a few industrial specialty shares inclined upward, but in lesser measure.

TRADING LISTLESS

Trading was listless and the ticker tape loafed. Brokers found buying interest only moderate, but were cheered somewhat by the comparative absence of offerings.

Ahead much of the time—there were slips at times due to profit-taking—were Johns-Manville, Crane Co., U. S. Gypsum, Sears Roebuck, Woolworth, Boeing, Douglas Aircraft, American Can, Texas Corp., Union Carbide, Eastman Kodak, Commercial Investment Trust and Loew's.

Unchanged to narrow were Chrysler, U. S. Steel, DuPont Kennecott, New York Central, Western Union, Consolidated Edison and Alaska Juneau.

American Telephone was again under pressure and lost around a point at one time to touch a 1938 low. Others to dip included International Harvester, J. I. Case, Timken Roller Bearing, Standard Oil of California and Liggett & Myers "B."

Bonds tended higher, especially in the secondary rail group. Prices of the major commodities were mixed. Foreign markets were inclined to be firm at the close.

Throughout the session Wall Street watched the "little" business conference at Washington, but small effect on trading was noted. Of interest was a report that at least two large blocks of common stock had been sold privately in the last few days, the sellers choosing this method because of the only languid interest on the exchange floor in recent sessions.

Events in Europe were watched carefully. While domestic copper sales were said to be near a standstill, heavy foreign demand was reported. There was considerable interest in the announced reentry of Great Britain in the international banking field through the relaxation of the London ban on foreign borrowing.

CURRENT TOPICS

Overnight news developments were not particularly cheering to the board room fraternity.

Iron Age reported few steel buyers were adding to their inventories pending wage negotiations between U. S. Steel subsidiaries and the SWOC next week, and their consequent possible effect on prices. On the other hand, the publication pointed out government work "looms large" in the construction field in the near future.

Electric power output for the week ended January 29 declined more than seasonally expected to a new low for 1937-38 the Edison Electric Institute disclosed. In the same period gasoline stocks gained 2,059,000 barrels, reflecting diminished consumption.

Electric Power Output Off

NEW YORK, Feb. 2 (AP)—Production of electricity in the United States for the week ended January 29 dropped to a new low for 1937-38 at 2,098,968,000 kilowatt hours, a decline of one-half of 1 per cent from 2,108,968,000 in the preceding week and 5.2 per cent under 2,214,656,000 in the comparable 1937 week, the Edison Electric Institute reported today.

The more than seasonal decline carried the Associated Press index of power production, with 1929-30 taken as 100, to 108.6 from 109.0 the previous week. A year ago the index, which is adjusted for seasonal and long-term trend, stood at 116.9.

The range for recent years follows:

	1937-38	1936	1935	1934	1933
High	125.2	119.8	105.5	97.4	91.9
Low	108.6	102.0	94.1	91.9	80.2

The institute reported the following percentage declines from the corresponding 1937 week according to major geographical areas: New England 10.3, Middle Atlantic 1.4, central industrial 9.1, West central 1.2, Southern States 2.4, Rocky Mountain 1.8, Pacific Coast 5.9.

American Woolen Has 1937 Loss

NEW YORK, Feb. 2 (AP)—American Woolen Co. and subsidiaries today reported for 1937 a net loss of $1,854,901. This compared with net profit of $1,929,982, equal to $5.03 a share of preferred stock in 1936.

Another 'Out' Of Economic Riddle

By MERRYLE STANLEY RUKEYSER

International News Service Financial Writer

NEW YORK, Feb. 2—The administration recently puzzled American business and finance by proposing that during the current depression prices of goods be reduced without cutting wages.

Practical business men became gloomy because they assumed it couldn't be done.

They knew that even the economies resulting from increased efficiency of labor would be offset in whole or in part by the rising per unit overhead cost while volume of orders remains low.

Of course, there is theoretically another way out of the economic riddle, but government itself must play a part.

This way would consist of cutting down on governmental expenditures and hence on taxes, which are an important and inflexible element in the cost of production.

To the extent that taxes are reduced, a larger share of the gross receipts would be available for distribution to workers as wages.

1928-36 ANALYSIS

This has never been made clearer than in a financial analysis of its affairs for the nine years, 1928-36, which the United States Steel Corporation has made for its employes. Continuing its significant experiment in reinterpreting financial accounts in elementary form, the Steel Corporation shows concretely how taxes come out of wages, reaffirming Franklin D. Roosevelt's apt observation in his Pittsburgh address in the 1932 campaign to the effect that taxes are paid in the sweat of every man who labors.

For example, if the Steel Corporation had paid no taxes whatsoever in those nine years, it would have had available a fund equal to one and a third years' of its average wages and salaries. Quite a wage dividend if the managing directors had been disposed to use it that way, in case it had become available.

AFFAIRS OF U. S. STEEL

On a per capita basis, the affairs of United States Steel are described as follows:

"The record is that of a man who had the use of tools and fixtures to the value of $11,554 for nine years. He did a business of $31,663, paid out $11,454 for goods and services in order to do business, $2,444 for wear and tear, $2827 for taxes, $412 in interest and $1947 to owners for the use of the tools and fixtures that enabled him to do business, and paid $13,379 to himself as wages."

The steel study makes it clear that the corporation merely acts as tax collector for the government, getting the tax funds out of its customers and out of its workers.

In tracing the source of taxes, the steel statement says:

"It (the tax bill) had to be paid before wages. The item is too large to have been added entirely to prices. It could not have been taken entirely from the share allotted to the owners, for during three years the owners had no share. Hence it must in part have been taken from the wages of workers and in part have been taken from the wages due to the owners for the use of their savings.

"No matter from what source this tax money seemed to come, however, in the end it mostly came out of somebody's wages. For taxes can be paid only out of production—they have to be paid out of goods. Wages are the principal cost of production and so a levy on production is principally a levy on wages.

LESS WORK, LESS WAGES

"It makes no difference if the taxes are not actually taken out of wages, but instead are added to the prices. Wages are only purchasing power, and raising prices without raising values is a method of reducing wages. Depriving owners of a fair return on their savings is a reduction in their purchasing power which turns up in decreased demand. That means less work and less wages.

"Taxes that confiscate the economies of improved machinery and prevent prices from being lowered tend to promote unemployment by shutting off the larger production which lower prices would bring out. That again means less work and less wages.

"Of course, the expenses of government must be paid for. It is for the people to decide how much government they want and how much they are willing to pay for it. That is one thing. It is something else to imagine that the other fellow will do the paying. There is no other fellow."

The used car end of my business is every bit as important to me as the new car. I feel that the buyer who takes a used car off my hands and gives me the opportunity to sell another new car deserves all the consideration I can possibly give.

+ Ask, and it sall be given you; seek, and ye shall find; knock, and it shall be opened unto you.—St. Matthew VII., 7. +

The text for today is suggested | the Rev. George Murray, Presbyterian Church, Brookline. The next text will be suggested by the Rev. Charles L. Page, Tremont Temple, Boston.

The Editor Says:

"Never was there a greater instance in history of the power of a nation—the United States—arrayed for defensive peace."—Benjamin DeCasseres in March of Events.

THERE are war-sparks from Asia and Europe flying all over the world. The duty of every American to his own country, to himself and to his family is to see that his brain and nerves shall not catch fire.

It is also the duty of our representatives at Washington to help the people of this country maintain the fine poise and coolness they have hitherto maintained in the face of some recent incidents.

We are a peaceful people. And that peacefulness, combined with a temperate view of the troubles of other nations, should produce in us a state of MENTAL as well as physical CALMNESS.

The United States government should not make too much of a Japanese sentry roughly repelling a United States consul or any MINOR matter incidental to the Asiatic war.

A sentry is not supposed to exercise his own judgment, but to obey orders.

If a sentry is told not to allow any one to enter a place HE IS SUPPOSED NOT TO ALLOW ANY ONE TO ENTER THE PLACE WHERE HE IS STATIONED.

If he has to use force to keep any one out, HE USES FORCE. That is his DUTY.

It would be the duty also of an American sentry. It is the duty of ANY SENTRY.

THE PANAY INCIDENT

—was almost a CASUS BELLI; but forcibly repelling an American envoy—of whom the Japanese sentry probably knew nothing and concerning whom the sentry could not have exercised any discretion if he did know—is far from being an incident of serious importance.

There is a little too much WAR PROPAGANDA creeping into the news.

It is better to try to AVOID A WAR than to try to provoke one.

We are thinking too much in terms of Asia and Europe and not enough IN TERMS OF AMERICA.

We have tremendous domestic problems to settle.

Let us not be turned away from them by such matters as the face-slapping of one of our diplomatic attaches.

Let us remain PEACEFUL without being pacifist, CALM without being inert, and friendly to all nations and peoples, but carefully spurning all foreign alliances that would disrupt our TRADITIONAL AMERICAN POISE.

MR. TOBIN'S DECISION

"It is my purpose to adopt every possible economy in order to avoid the immediate discharge of hundreds of employes or the material reduction of the wages of them all."
—Mayor Tobin.

The Mayor's warning concerns all Boston residents, city employe residents especially.

We all know that Boston is in serious financial difficulties, that only drastic action can avert bankruptcy.

No exaggeration is Mr. Tobin's parable likening the city to a family that refuses to face facts and continues to spend 20 per cent more than it earns.

Consequently sensible economies must be effected. There is a limit to the money that taxes can provide, and that limit obviously is perilously near.

In view of the situation, the Mayor is obliged to choose one of two courses. He could eliminate waste and extravagance. Or he could reduce wages and discharge scores of municipal employes.

His selection is the abolition of services that can be sacrificed without great loss. "My aim," he explains, "is to protect those who face the threat of dismissal."

That is a wise choice. A recession is very much with us. Suffering is all too general. Certainly, therefore, this is NOT THE TIME for Boston to lead the way in cutting wages.

HEALTHIER MOTHERS

"Mothers are stronger today than they were a quarter of a century ago, and their strength is being passed along to their babies to make a healthier race."—Dr. Richard A. Morgner.

Dr. Morgner speaks with the authority of great experience. His record of delivering 4316 babies, including 47 sets of twins, has earned him the title of "Stork's Chief Aide" at Tufts College Medical School.

Thanks to visiting nurses' associations, clinics and the daily newspaper columns of Dr. Royal S. Copeland and others, women no longer regard maternity with the fear, superstition and ignorance so common three decades ago.

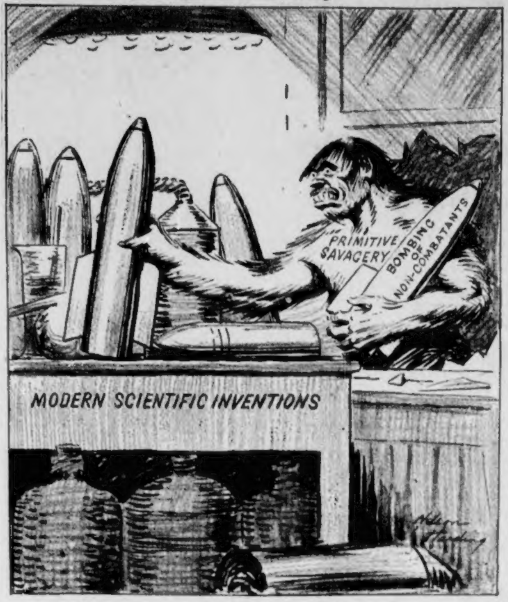
It is a great national achievement and one that cannot be too extravagantly praised.

However—and this is important—we cannot afford to rest on our newly won laurels. There is much to be done in the next ten years. Childbirth deaths are still alarmingly numerous not only in Massachusetts, but everywhere throughout the United States.

In fact, as the late Arthur Brisbane truthfully observed many times, the Indian mother bearing her child alone in the wilderness was often safer than a modern American mother in a modern American home or hospital.

The Caveman in the Laboratory

By Nelson Harding



Beneficent in the arts of peace, science has given a new ferocity to war.

The wars in Spain and China have proved that aggressive war now is waged against civilian populations as well as against armed forces.

Desiring peace, America has to insure against war in order to HOPE for peace.

As President Roosevelt said last Friday in his message to Congress, this nation must be so armed as to keep any assailants hundreds of miles from our shores, or to vanquish them should they be able to invade.

New York Day by Day -:-

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, Feb. 2.

A RUNNER-UP for the late George Horace Lorimer's aversion to New York is Karl Bickel, ex-newspaper man. Bickel is among the few high-powered executives to call it a day while on the hither side of 50. He saved his kudos while the going was good and now coasts.

His big job was president of the United Press. After settling his affairs he set out for Sarasota, Fla., where he built a hacienda, surrounded himself with a kennel of favorite dogs and now comes to New York only when he has to take a liner for Europe.

Irvin Cobb, so long a part of the local scene, went to Hollywood to fill a six-week contract. That was four years ago. He has been back but once and was then the proverbial fish out of water. Both his city apartments on Park avenue and country place at Easthampton are on the market.

No one perhaps was a more dyed-in-the-wool Broadwayite than Mason Peters, wit and newspaper man. He formed a sudden dislike for the town and quit it about six years ago. A few months ago he returned for a month's visit but left the metropolis flat in 48 hours.

New York has a Shanghai Refugee Club, composed of those who had to flee the war-stricken Chinese city without possessions. There are several hundred here trying to get a new hold on life—a fresh start. There was a strict order: "No dogs or animals allowed in evacuation." Thus it was a number refused to go and many paid for such understandable devotion with their lives. And most of the deserted dogs left behind were slain.

It's an odd assortment of types and certainly the most bewhiskered that comprises the audience at the Cameo, a movie a hop skip off Broadway in 42nd street. It exploits chiefly the Russian film and news pictures stressing the progress of the Soviet. Many jabber away in native tongue. The women are the shawled and shrinking prototypes of the Ghetto doorways. All are undemonstrative, seldom laughing, applauding or booing.

Among most popular of the de-luxe liner pursers is the satiny Henry Villar of the Normandie, who, it is reported, may retire in a season or so. He began pursing on the Paris, then went to the Ile de France and on to his present post. Once a marine lawyer at Havre, he was pressed into service during an emergency and proved so affable and capable he was induced to quit avocating and make sailing a career.

He speaks seven languages, but his chief charm is in his exquisite manners. He seems absolutely crushed with sympathy when nasty weather comes and has a way of bending over a lady's hand for a bee's wing kiss that makes her feel the ship is hers.

The seasoned voyager, incidentally, is not always the jaunty sailor, in the sense of freedom from mal de mer. Frazier Hunt becomes nauseated going up a gang plank and remains in bed unable to raise his head until he reaches the other side. I have been in two fierce Atlantic gales and in both instances the captains confessed they had their uneasy moments.

No illnesses—and I've had some honeys—bring on such an all gone feeling as sea sickness. Nor is any recovery so complete and rapid. I once actually considered ordering an ambulance to trundle me to Paris when within a few hours of Havre, and it is no exaggeration that ten minutes after I landed I was doing a jig under the train sheds.

And after several wan days of splitting a grape with my wife for food, we each tore into a Chateaubriand with trimmings for breakfast on the boat train.

That's That -:- -:-

By Bruce Gustin

At the hearings before the House Committee on Rivers and Harbors, it was testified that Colorado alone has enough coal to supply the whole nation for 300 years, and Wyoming has enough to supply the whole nation for 100 years, and that Pennsylvania's anthracite coal supply will last 300 years. And more than two dozen other States have large coal resources.

The regional planning scheme is a good example of the fallacy of regarding every problem as a national problem and assuming there must be a national solution. The theory of the bill is that more power and cheaper power are national needs, and therefore we should have a national solution which amounts to nationalization of water resources and their use in generating electricity.

But that is a ridiculous policy for regions which have an abundance of coal and must use their water for irrigation if they are to continue to exist and develop.

The move made by the Securities Commission to stop short selling in a declining securities market will be widely approved. There probably has been more criticism of short selling than of any other practice connected with stock exchanges.

Speculative features incidental to the buying and selling of stocks and commodities can never be entirely eliminated. And they should not be. But short selling is downright gambling and even worse is the fact that it often injures thousands of honest investors.

We must have stock exchanges where people can invest their savings and dispose of stocks and bonds they want to sell. But these cannot serve their legitimate purpose if they are to degenerate into gambling rackets.

According to a copyrighted International News Service dispatch, the United States has agreed secretly to recognize Italy's conquest of Ethiopia whenever Great Britain gets ready to do that. There is no reason why we should delegate to any other nation the formulation of our foreign policies.

Human Side of the News -:-

By Edwin C. Hill

THE surprising victory of old James Braddock over young Tommy Farr is a reminder that Irish fighters mature late, and it is never safe to bet against them just because of an age handicap.

Several months ago this writer unearthed some facts about Braddock, and here's one of them. When he was 29 years old he grew slightly more than an inch in height. His father, at the age of 32, grew an inch and a half.

Once in Ireland an old, white-bearded man was weeping by the roadside. "What are you crying for?" asked a passing stranger. "My father whipped me." "What for?" "I was throwing stones at my grandfather."

Bob Fitzsimmons, old "Ruby Bob," with a mule kick, a chunk of slag and a stick of dynamite in each glove, was fighting like a wildcat until he was 54.

Jake Kilrain, who died the other day at the age of 82, was a good rough-and-tumble mauler until well along in his forties, as tough as an oak for many years after that seismic session with the Boston boy.

And John L. Sullivan himself was older than Braddock is now when James J. Corbett took his title. Gene Tunney was 28 years old before he became champion.

Jim Mitchel was a champion hammer-thrower after his hair and moustache were turning gray. There was a fine case exhibit for the staying power of the Irish.

Wherever you find a bunch of old-time New York reporters yarning about the good old days you will be sure to hear tales of Jim Mitchel. He was a sports reporter on the old Morning Sun, around the turn of the century.

Once, just in the day's work, he turned up a rattling good story about Monk Eastman and his gang. It was one of the grandest feats of hammer-throwing Jim ever did, and it wrapped the hammer right around Eastman's neck.

Jim began to get mysterious telephone calls warning him that the Monk Eastman gang was rehearsing for a finished job of mayhem on his ample and amiable person.

Jim, a quiet, easy-going chap, said he wasn't worried, and he figured he would be able to take care of himself if they started any trouble.

Late one night Jim was plugging away at a story when the entrance hall of the building began to fill with greasy-looking, ham-fisted, squirrel-headed gents, all of the most unlovely and forbidding appearance and boding no good to anybody.

An office boy ran into the local room and yelled to Jim to make a get-away out the back door.

Instead, Jim carefully finished his sentence, arranged the papers carefully on his desk and, instead of heading for the rear, barged out into the entrance hall, picking up momentum as he moved toward the mob.

Jim was six feet three inches tall and his person seemed pretty nearly square when you looked at him head-on. There was a frightened yell from the assembled mugs when they saw this human beer truck bearing down on them. Jim was swinging both potato-sack fists as they dived down the stairway and out the door. They kept right on going.

Jim ambled back to his desk and finished his story. Well into his forties, he kept on throwing the hammer—a world champion.

Just another reminder not to figure the Irish out until after the full count of ten.

The Political Parade -:-

By George Rothwell Brown

WASHINGTON, Feb. 2.

ONE must read between the lines of Mr. Roosevelt's supplementary armaments message with a microscope to bring to light all the weak spots in the national defense.

The hearings on the two bills—one for the Army and the other for the Navy—will develop so many danger signs that they will be conducted in the greatest secrecy. Much of the information doubtless will remain confidential.

It isn't only that the United States is merely "deficient" in anti-aircraft protection in time of war, and that we have no enlisted reserve force in this country, as was exclusively pointed out in this place last week.

The President, in his message, proposes to remedy these two great weaknesses.

In event of war every seacoast in the country, Atlantic, Pacific and Gulf would descend upon Washington with demands for anti-aircraft guns, as in 1898 the threat of war with Spain brought insistent calls for naval help from Boston, New York, Baltimore and other cities.

In EVENT OF WAR TODAY WE WOULDN'T HAVE ANTI-AIRCRAFT GUNS ENOUGH TO DEFEND ONE AMERICAN CITY!

This is shocking and must be remedied. Whilst piling up a debt of 20 billions for a grand total of 40, we have left our lives, our honor and our industries open to the menace of a modern, undeclared war.

Do you know why the Navy has just asked for $3,000,000 to lay up a supply of manganese? Incidentally Congress turned the request down. It may change its mind, and high time.

There is some manganese in the United States, about six per cent of peace-time needs. We import the rest from Russia. There is never a time WHEN THERE IS MORE THAN A FOUR MONTHS' SUPPLY ON HAND.

In event of war, unless our Navy could convoy ships from Russia with manganese, every steel mill in the United States would close down and the making of guns, armaments and war essentials would cease. Not a comforting prospect.

War and Navy experts are seeking by every means to build up war essentials which we do not produce. All our tin must be imported, and we are at the mercy, as to price and quantity, of foreign monopolists. It is vitally essential in practically every war weapon. So is antimony, and we produce practically none.

We have to import these things, without which we could not make or use weapons of defense:

Silk, rubber, nickel, coffee, chromium, manila fibre, quinine, iodine, jute, quicksilver, high quality mica used in electrical instruments, and many other things. We import 49 per cent of our wool.

Congress is becoming awakened to the fact that we need a Merchant Marine—and a Navy to keep the sea lanes open. Otherwise we might be sunk!

There is only one way to pay the extra billion that this new national defense is going to cost. It must not be passed on to the already overburdened taxpayers in additional debt and taxes.

It must be taken out of the well-lined pockets of bureaucracy. It must be paid for in reduced overheads of government expense. Bureaucracy in this country—in Washington alone—has virtually doubled in five years.

The whole of this year's cost of the extra national defense can easily be paid for FROM SAVINGS and not FROM TAXES.

March of Events -:-

By Benjamin DeCasseres

ON THE Cunarder Georgic.—Four days at sea to and from Nassau revealed to me that human beings are at their very best on the ocean.

Here we are surrounded by a common enemy, the sea. We all know that that placid, smiling circle of water can rouse itself in an hour and hurl us and our floating house to Kingdom Come.

Therefore, we draw closer to one another. Mentally and emotionally, we huddle against one another like a score of persons on a life-raft.

There is on the boat a quick sympathy for and instant impulse to help any one who is ill, although you may never see that person again after landing.

Here all religious, racial, social and political prejudices disappear. There are only good-fellowship, gaiety and courtesy. All classes are abolished on the promenade deck and in the social lounge. An ever-lurking danger makes us one.

The sea is, after all, a mighty graveyard. And it is the ever-present consciousness of that fact in the back-alley or our heads that draws us closer to one another.

In the great panorama that is gradually unfolding itself in the Orient, Siam now comes squarely into the focus of world-events.

Siam is lodged like a huge walnut between the two pinchers of a giant nutcracker.

On her east is French Indo-China. On the west is Burma. A part of the British-owned Indian Empire. Upper Burma was "annexed" by England in 1886 and Lower Burma was taken from China by conquest in 1826 and 1852.

Now, Siam today is Fascist, and is therefore naturally pro-Japanese and pro-German. At the extreme end of the Malay Peninsula, which is a British possession dangling at the bottom of Siam, is Singapore, which the British are fortifying in feverish haste.

Why all this nervousness? The answer is, as revealed exclusively in the Hearst papers, the proposition of Japan to Siam to build the Kra Canal right across Siam, which would bring India 1200 miles closer to Japan.

But this would do Japan very little good, for in a British-French-Chinese-Russian combination Siam would be crushed and "annexed" in a week.

William E. Gladstone and Thomas Henry Huxley must have rolled over in their graves to smile at one another when they heard that the Church of England after 14 years' study had voted to uphold the evolutionary idea of creation.

The Church of England now finds that there is no essential difference between the account of the creation of the world in Genesis and the theory that the universe grew gradually, just as an acorn grows into an oak or a baby into a man.

The seven days of creation are obviously great periods of time.
